i have owned the yaesu VR5000 and it had the DSP 1 fitted.. i paid ?650 for the VR5000 new i owned it for 3 months then sold it and lost over ?250 on what i paid new...

i then decided to go out and pay for the best i could afford what did i buy. a new model AOR AR5000A+3 with the New SDU5600 spectrum display unit this lot cost me near ?3000..

now my opinion of the Yaesu VR5000 after owning a real receiver for a couple of months well not much i should have got the AOR to start with......

Yaesu radio equipment is supposed to be one of the best makes in the modern world today......well the VR5000 isn't i would not touch another what a waist of my hard earned cash load of crap i don't know how yaesu can get away with selling such crap the VR5000 isn't doing there reputation much good.....

i buy and sell second hand receivers and have done for about the last year i have had many many models almost every realistic scanner.
well the performance of the realistic scanners puts the VR5000 to shame

Go for the AOR much better scanner..... were i buy and sell scanners. i would not buy another VR5000 as they are total crap not worth the hassle i would not pay more than ?50 to ?60 for one.....save you money go buy the AOR..

look in SW magazine at the read up on the VR5000 totally puts the VR5000 down.....

i can hear them and i do have the right equipment i.e AOR AR5000A+3

Hi, everyone -

I have a Radio Shack Pro-26 scanner that I picked up over 5 years ago at a Radio Shack Outlet store.

I love the thing! I was changing my batteries in it today and I noticed that there are terminals in it that appear to be for a rechargable battery. Is there such a beast that I can buy for it and use the charging jack on the side of the scanner? Also, was there ever a leather type case made for it?

I actually have everything for it - the service manual, parts list, owner's manual, and box - :-)

Thanks,
Jon

My PRO-26 uses 4 regular AA rechargables, using cat# 273-1665 AC adapter (9v 300ma) for recharging or AC power.

Don't know about case.

not excatly sur what you mean, but if you mean the third contact terminal where the battey pack goes in then yes.
there is a rechargeable pack you can use, or if you are cheeky you can wire a diode across inside to put the power to the normal + terminal from the charge terminal.

the mod is on the net somewhere i expect.

i think it was the 36 i saw it for.

Read the whole letter.....

Dear DNC and Candidates:

Thank you for giving me the opportunity to speak my mind. I lost my job this past year.

When Clinton was president, I ran a prosperous enterprise. But in the last year, we had to close our operations.

Far worse, I lost two of my sons in Bush's evil war in Iraq. They gave their lives for their country, and for what? My pain of losing my sons is indescribable. While it is trivial next to the loss of my sons, I regret to say that I also lost my homes. I simply have nothing left.

I am a senior citizen with various medical problems. I'm not in a position where I can begin a new career. I was reduced to the point where I was homeless, all because of President Bush.

And when the authorities found me, did they have any compassion for my misfortune and ailments? No, I was arrested. If I had any money left, I would donate it to the Democratic party. If Al Gore had been elected in 2000, I guarantee you, I would still have a job, a home, and most importantly, my sons!

Regards,

Saddam Hussein

What kind of scanner will pick up overseas broadcasts?? I know countries

Just put four rechargeable batteries in. They can be recharged inside the Pro 26 if you use the 9volt "charge" socket.
Takes a little longer if the radio is on though.

You say "VHF/UHF" and "all [amateur] bands" so I assume you mean "all Amateur VHF/UHF bands. I would get the Kenwood TH-F6:

- It transmits on 2m, 1.25m, and 70cm.
- It receives from 0.1 MHz to just under 1.3 GHz.
- It receives SSB from 0.1 MHz to just under 470 MHz.
- It has two receivers and will simultaneously receive and output audio on both. It will even scan separately on both.

However, for versatility and durability in the field I prefer Icom's IC-T90A. It has a very durable chassis (I've dropped it 1 meter to cement and asphalt several times) and two very easily programmed VFO's. With an external antenna, the 6m band on this radio covers good range.

What I really need is the TH-f6 combined with the T90A to give me 70cm, 1.25m, 2m, and 6m, dual receivers, and SSB. The addition of 10m FM would also be nice. I will also gladly accept an SSB handheld for any/all HF bands.

Many scanners cover 27 MHz so folks can have Ch 19, 27.185 Mhz AM in a memory of a mobile scanner in the car. So they can keep track of traffic.
If you put CH 19 in a priority channel, this will emulate a CB radio and allow instant access to road hazards, that may be broadcast over CB! One of my favorite saves is " ladders in the travel lane" that appear to have fallen off a truck, on the interstate highways here in New England. Once you get a feeling for the limitations of CB radios and understand them then CB monitoring is OK.

Hi

Anyone on the group have a BC 780 and Winscan 780?
I have both, and am having a heck of a time getting the thing to start trunk tracking. I have inputted all the freqs including the voice and data control channel into the scanner, along with putting the talkgroups into the talkgroup field and then pressing the update button. Is there something else that needs to be done to make the radio start tracking properly?

All the systems and freqs that I am trying to set up for tracking are MOT TYPE II systems

Thanks Zach

1.8kHz would be far too close to be usable.

8.33kHz is the smallest spacing that has been approved for voice comms in the airband.

do the last row of buttons 'bottom-out' when youpress them to the same extent as the above row?
just wondering if you have the pcb down flat?

try powering from an extenal source remove battery cover & batteries push PCB toward case from inside as you retry the naff buttons.

if not could be the common feed track on the pcb's last row thats gone.

try tracing it with an ohms meter with the power off.

Know several people that trashed Winscan and bought ARC780/Butel. It works perfect and easy to understand.
One little problem understanding List Tags and Bank tags and freq tags. Figured it out and pleased. Larry

Make SURE the connector from the logic board (keypad/cpu) doesn't have any bent pins. Also, make sure you didn't crack a trace on the PC board somehow. I've done dozens of keypads, and never had to clean anything.

Hello, hello.

I just got a scanner as a gift yesterday (BC60XLT-1) along with a frequency book (Police Call 40th Anniversary); and I would like to ask a question or two from the experienced scanners (is that the proper term?) out there.

I have searched a few websites, and read the books/manuals, but I can not find out what the "colors" refer to. I'll use these listings for example:

Lompoc City of (Red Channel) 460.0500
Lompoc City of (Green Channel) 460.1250

Just what do the colors refer to, and are certain colors more viable (or important) than others?

Thank you in advance!

8.33kHz has begun to be employed in Europe. It is used for the high level on route broadcasts. No time frame has been given for its use outside of Europe.

As to the 780, there is no way to change its steps. You can tune it using 10kHz steps, so you will only be a little bit off frequency.

Probably this is a means to differentiate between channels. Instead of calling them channel 1, channel 2, etc., they use colors. Each channel probably has its own purpose. If it's a local government, one might be the main police dispatch frequency, another may be a tactical channel (used for officers to communicate directly with each other at a crime scene, accident, fire, etc.), one may be for fire dispatch, one could be public works, etc.

Thats the coverage of a UBC-780XLT.

If your use of the word "Blocked" refers to the frequencies used by analogue cellular in the USA then the UBC-780XL is "Unblocked".

Both the UBC-780XLt and BC-780XLT do not receive 956-1240MHz.

This is true. Here they have names like, Bolden, Granger, Tac, etc.
It's to distinguish between sectors, beats, detectives, admin and such.

Maybe because he wants to see and touch it before he buys it, wants a place to take it back to should something go wrong without the hassle of shipping it, because he doesn't want to pay shipping charges which could be more than the sales tax, and maybe he wants it NOW!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

That was exactly what I was after. Wanted to see it in person and break it in the store before I got my hands on it at home. I have bought a few things on the Internet and was disapointed with it. I finally said the hell with it and ordered the BC-785D.

Did pretty good on the price too. $281 total. I did want it NOW too. LOL Nothing gets me more than spending a whole day researching it on the web and not able to go drive down and get it.

I am doing some research in these regards trying to gain access to the Columbus Ohio Police MDT system for the Columbus Dispatch (legally and with their blessings).

I'm looking for information any information regarding the media or other people gaining access (legally) to public service communications that would be otherwise be considered secure.
This would include access to the trunked radio systems - before trunk trackers, MDT access, or access to scrambled communications.

I would also be interested in any other information that any of you may have in regards to ANY news organization getting access to new communications technology (such as trunked radio systems before the trunk trackers, or MDT access) either through lawsuits or by mutual co-operation.

Anything you can do to help would be much appreciated.

I see you are in Lake in the Hills. Being that far north, why not head up to AES in Milwaukee?? As far as "the toy store", I've tried to visit the place in the past. The hours are kind of hit and miss. You may want to call first to make sure the owner will be there as it seems like a one-man shop.

I have one I imported from Finalnd (unbocked - full coverage). Nice to travel with but wouldn't use it as a "base" type scanner. Nice features overall. One thing I like is you can pass around files for the scanenr from others and upload them to yours.

I am in Glen Ellyn area..... I looked at AES and thought about it. I would have had to pay sales tax which would have brought it up there a little in price. Ended up getting it from www.buy.com for $281 shipped. AES was $299 delivered without tax. Suppose I could have had them ship it from AES and probably gotten it quicker than buy.com and not paid the tax.which would have been $16.80.

Total from AES would have been $306.79 not including a 200 mile round trip, and we all know what gas costs these days.

I've found Radioworld (Jack especially) very helpful. I've purchased a number of items from them, both in person and via their website. They do seem to have website hiccups once in awhile, but if I've found them worth the trouble. As you probably know, they're one of the few remaining Canadian sources!

Well, thanks for the suggestions, guys. I already have the 245XLT and the VX-7R and, at this point, I think I am sold on the IC-706 for the final addition to my portable radio package. I will be selling my R75 and R71 and my Kenwood 830 real soon and replacing them with the 706 and the backpack rig - very nice setup. Thanks!

Not happy with life span of their batt pack. Any suggestions as to an after market battery that is compatible?

Thanks for the kind words Alan. Unfortunately Radioworld has been plagued with poor performance from our ISP's which have resulted in downtime from time to time. We have made a major commitment to resolve this problem this week. The page is now up and running once again. (It may take up to 48 hours to fully propigate.)

Please contact me directly if there are any concerns or if there is any assistance I may offer.

Sincerely

2114. IC-R2 won't power up after long idle period

Hi.

My 3 year old R2 got stuck in a drawer for 8 months or so (with batteries removed). Now it won't power up. Holding the power button in does nothing (no display, no sound). Voltage looks good across the batteries while in place in the battery holder (and the terminals don't look obviously deteriorated). I've also tried the partial and full reset key combinations from the manual with no luck.

Any clues where to start?

Thanks,
Geoff...

Spam from VoteNader.org? (Or naderexplore04.org)

You may have received spam email recently that appears to come from our campaign, or be about our campaign -- perhaps the "From" and or "Reply-to" addresses look like they are coming from VoteNader.org. Or perhaps you have received a message that appears to come from an individual (if the address is real, the real owner probably did not send this email either) with suppressed recipients. Or maybe you received an email that appeared to come from yourself promoting our site.

These messages are NOT from Nader for President 2004, and these email tactics are NOT condoned by our campaign in any way.

UPDATE: Some of the latest forged emails have been made to appear to be coming from naderexplore04.org. Again, we are not responsible for this unfortunate abuse of email, and there is little in the technical sense that we can do to prevent this as it has nothing to do with our actual infrastructure. We are collecting information.

NOTE: The emails with malicious code (viruses, worms, etc.) often have attachments. Our campaign will NEVER send attachments in our announcement emails to you. Please be sure that you have anti-virus software and have the latest updates available for your anti-virus software.

Our hosting service has alerted us to say that Nader for President 2004 appears to be the target of what is called a "Joe Job." Such an event is where a spammer forges email to make it appear to have come from some other domain (such as ours -- or yourself). This is hard to prevent on our end and part of the insecure nature of the email protocol in general.

Members of our actual email list must request to receive email from us (either through Ralph's signup sheets or subscribing during our exploratory phase, or now on our campaign site). When one signs up for email they must reply to a confirmation message before they receive our list announcements.

Our public announcement emails come from "campaign@votenader.org," contain a "Paid for by Nader for President 2004" statement at the bottom, and have "updates@lists.votenader.org" in the "To:" header. Unfortunately, some of these indicators can be forged as well.

Most of the Spam that we have received complaints about appear to be forged from email addresses not associated with votenader.org (often forged to appear to be coming from government email addresses), and have our website code embedded in the body of the email with hidden tags that contain random words that work to subvert anti-spam software.

If you are on our lists, you can ALWAYS unsubscribe at ANY time by following the instructions included at the end of our announcements. You can also use our unsubscribe page using the email address you signed up with.

If you are receiving this SPAM, we extend our apologies.

We will pursue the spammers to the full extent of the law.

i would think it must have some kind of internal 'memory retention' system could be a rechargeable, lithium, or capacitor discharge system.

might be worthwhile to leave a set of batteries in overnight to see if it 'comes alive'

if not, try the full reset again, maybe a night with power will sort it.

My guess would be all non-voice mode communications taking place in the frequency coverage. I guess my main concern is what if I can't receive even the voice communication unless it is FM or AM. For instance, to hear trunk services, one needs expensive scanner (eg. Radio Shack Pro-96). Any comments?

I reviewed the USA version of the ICOM IC-R5 in July 2003 Monitoring Times magazine, then wrote free software for it.

I like the IC-R5 and carry it almost everywhere now. The audio is quite good, it has several variable size memory banks, CTCSS and DCS squelch, and a number of other attractive features. The IC-R5 is a bit more complicated to use than the IC-R2 is replaces due to the added features (I own both models.)

Suggest you join the "icr5" and "icomR5" Yahoo discussion groups and read through the article archives.

Be warned that the USA version has some frequency gaps which may prevent you from monitoring some stations in your area. These frequencies may not be used in your location so it might not matter.

ICOM deletes the 822 - 851 and 867 - 896 MHz ranges in the USA version IC-R5 to comply with FCC requirements for rejection of cellular telephone signals.
The USA version IC-R5 will not receive 822 - 824, 849 - 851, 867 - 870, and 894 - 896 MHz even though these bands are not allocated to cellular telephony.

I am accustomed to listenening to radio systems in 3 nearby towns in the 867 - 869 MHz range and the USA version IC-R5 wouldn't permit that.

I was fortunate to find a used, UK version IC-R5 which doesn't have these gaps.

If you do get an IC-R5, you are welcome to use tk5, the free, open source software I wrote. You can read more about it at my web site http://parnass.com

I'm not following.

You can certainly hear any signal with an FM or AM front end. You can certainly hear data signals. Truck tracking is a different story. You can still listen to trunked services, but entering the correct frequencies, but the radio won't track from channel to channel without a trunk tracking radio.

What'cha trying to hear?

Capacitors have a tendency to dry out and stop operating after several months of non operation,its possible thats whatrs happenned to yours. Looking at the capacitors you cant tell a good one from a dead one [worse luck],i suggest you put it into you local tech shop and after you get it back fire it up atleast once a month.

It looks like it will be another good day for monitoring the Military in the Key West area.
DARKSTAR QUEBEC, an AWACS acft, is controlling aircraft in the Tarpon Range. MAKO and SHARK F-16s from Homestead JARB are working the area. VANDY flights are also working in that area; and DARKSTAR Q asked another flight if they are from "the Tyndall [AFB] Schoolhouse."
Freqs in use so far this morning are: 352.2, 344.2, and 250.6.
The Sarasota area UHF Hi-alt freqs are also busy.
To the north of me, it is heating up at the Pinecastle Range in Ocala, where GATOR F/A-18s from NAS Atlanta NAS are working the range. Freqs in use are 357.0, 380.8, as well as their air-air freq 328.55.
Sealord can also be heard working acft in the offshore Whiskey area on 267.5.

Greetings,

I'd like to set up a 780XLT and computer to take a frequency survey.

Essentually I'd like to set it up so that it scans a given band of frequencies when I'm not around, counting the number of hits vs frequency and perhaps recording the hits for later listening.

(A way to discover new/changed frequencies that isn't time/manpower intensive.)

Does such software exist? Would another/different scanner be easier?

Ok, so today in my town there was a fairly decent fire going and I was wondering if it's possible to just lock on to a particular talk-group ID to follow it. LIke, I kept getting interrupted by dispatch etc. How do I do it if it is possible?

Thanks,

Jim

Hearing a SSB signal on FM or AM is not very good. Especially when you

Recently had the problems others have experienced with my PRO-2004 in relation to the unit powering up but not showing the display and only emitting a hiss from the speaker. After reading through all the previous posts to this group about this problem I believe it is a loose or dry solder joint.

Now I have pulled the beast apart and inspected it but have come up empty handed. Can somebody who has experienced this problem suggest some likely points to examine, or suggest another cause of action which could be taken.

Cheers,
Jabba

Why do you give the US-version specs?
The EU-version has general coverage with no gaps.
0.1khz (500khz guaranteed) to 1300Mhz continously.

Well, thanks for the replies so far. Obviously I won't be able to hear NSA or AF1 etc even though they use the same frequency spectrum for communication. Most likely they'd use spread spectrum and/or some other kind of encryption. Theoretically any type of signal that can be encoded can be decoded. So, am I correct that scanners can't receive and decode ALL signals even if they are in standard AM, FM, SSB modes?

I'd be dumbfounded if AF1 broadcasts in standard AM mode on 126.5 MHz for instance. Thus, having a scanner that covers airband wouldn't be able to receive AF1 communication.

AirForce One? I must have a special scanner than cause I hear AF1 all the time. In fact if you go to

You WILL, repeat WILL hear AF1 broadasts in the clear in standard AM on the VHF and UHF aviation bands. You will NEVER hear AF1 calling ATC (Air Traffic Control) in anything but standard AM modes on VHF, if they did ATC would never hear them as ATC has no form of "kaptain krunch encoding/decoding rings" in their facility.

Listen to this: http://www.milaircomms.com/audio/032603airforceone.mp3
This is AF1 in "standard" AM in Florida on March 26, 2003 I caught these comms between Airforce One and Jacksonville Center (ATC). You'll hear AF1 contacting several different sectors in the JAX Center area. Frequencies this was recorded are 126.3500, 134.0000, 133.3250 MHz.

I guess your "dumbfounded" now....just kidding ;)

I heard Air Force One one evening when Clinton was leaving my county's airport after some stops in south NJ. Some local hams were announcing the frequencies to monitor as it left the Trenton area and went into Philadelphia ATC space, and I just happened to be monitoring the local repeaters that evening. As I recall, it was all on the standard Approach/Departure channels for these airports.

You didn't give a range for your cost target, but the Icom IC-R3 (about $370), Yaesu VR-5000 (about $600), AOR AR8200MkIII (about $570) or AOR AR8600MkII (about $890) will get you up to the 2.4 GHz range (up to 3 GHz for the AOR), but you can pretty much forget about 5 GHz in anything "inexpensive". Most inexpensive scanners only go up to 1.3 GHz. The ones I mentioned are probably about the least expensive units that go up to 2.4 GHz. All would have an earphone or line out jack.

We have been down this road before.

U.S. troops sent to war half a world away. American foreign policy controlled by an arrogant elite, bent on projecting military power around the globe. A public misled into supporting an unconstitutional war founded on deceit and fabrications.

As the death toll mounts, we hear claims that the war is nearly won, that victory is just around the corner. But victory never arrives.

As the public loses confidence in the government, the government questions the patriotism of any who express doubt about the war.

When a presidential election arrives, both the Democrat and Republican nominees embrace the policy of continued war.

The military draft comes to dominate the lives of America's young, and vast numbers who believe the war to be a senseless blunder are faced with fighting a war they do not believe in, or facing exile or prison.

The year was 1968. Because voters had no choice that November, the Vietnam War continued for another six years. Hundreds of thousands of Americans like you died, were maimed, or suffered from diseases like malaria. A far greater number of Vietnamese died.

Today, the war is in the quicksands and alleys of Iraq. Once again, under the pressure of a determined resistance, we see an American war policy being slowly torn apart at the seams, while the candidates urge us to "stay the course" in this tragic misadventure. Today's Presidential candidates are not Nixon and Humphrey, they are now Bush and Kerry.

Once again, there is one overriding truth: If war is the only choice in this election, then war we will have.

Today enlistments in the Reserves and National Guard are declining. The Pentagon is quietly recruiting new members to fill local draft boards, as the machinery for drafting a new generation of young Americans is being quietly put into place.

Young Americans need to know that a train is coming, and it could run over their generation in the same way that the Vietnam War devastated the lives of those who came of age in the sixties.

I am running for President, and have been against this war from the beginning. We must not waste lives in order to control and waste more oil. Stand with us and we may yet salvage your future and Americas' future from this looming disaster.

Sincerely,
Ralph Nader

Here's an odd question: I have 4 radios I'd like to mount in my car instead of the car stereo that comes with it. Two radios are standard AM, FM, but have shortwave capability also. One is an amateur radio (Yaesu FT-212), and the fourth is a satellite radio.

Does anyone make an adjustable radio rack that would allow for mounting multiple radios in a car?

Any thoughts or suggestions would be appreciated.

Thanks in advance.

Not sure about the AM/FM radios and the satellite radio, may have to do some finagling to get them to fit, but there are radio racks/trees sold for just that purpose for those who use many two way radios in a vehicle, such as a police car. Many places offer them. Lou

I don't want to install a discriminator tap ATM and don't want to get a FSK converter cable either just yet.

There is a decent one for the PCR-1000, that works a treat here :) The software is available free, the author will accept/deserves donations :) However if you don't have a PCR-1000 it could hardly be called free ;)

Info is here in case your interest is piqued :)

In my experience, it takes more than a few months for capacitors to dry-up. Even 8 months doesnt sound long enough for it to be a dry cap problem (Although it is a possibility). It sounds more like a memory retention problem, or a screwed up micro-processor. An Icom dealer might have a suggestion for you. Try putting in fresh batteries, or external power, then remove them, then full reset, then power again, and see what happens. If this doesn't solve your problem, then it is time for an authorized Icom dealer to have a look...SIG-INT

You can't get mobiles coz they're digital.
You can only get Police pr in a couple of counties now and soon not at all - they will all be digital too.

Air, marine, some police vhf, fire, ambulance and pmr can all be received on a pretty basic scanner. Don't spend £500 - £50 and some time on ebay should do the trick for your needs.

A decent uniden, gec or yup will be ideal. If ebay scares you then go to either a web shop (nevada etc) or Maplin and get a gec or bearcat - try to stay under £100 new, should be possible.

Or theres always the little Maycom AR108 - about £70 for a new machine that is designed for air band.

You get down to it, it's about the same distance plus I fell that "The toy store" has better deals and are more customer friendly. Yes AES is a bigger location than the Toy store, but it's nicer to have someone who is more friendly than a person who is a jurk and don't care about anything about getting a sale.

The AR2515 was a "product" of ACE Communications some years ago who were, at the time the distributors of AOR equipment in the USA.

ACE Communications modified AOR AR2002's by replacing the main processor board. It was not an AOR Japan product. The end result was 1984 memory channels together with 12 search banks and a scanner that, at the time was considerably faster than anything else and to say the least far more memory.

The 1984 channels are organised into 62 banks 32 channels. You cannot program frequencies into specific "channels" within each bank as the main CPU organised each bank into numerical order. It didn't matter which order you keyed frequencies in they would be sorted numerically.
The reason for this highlighted one of the AR2515 problems in so much as the replacement CPU ran faster through the channels that the original AR2002's PLL circuitry could keep up with. By numerically going up through the bank it helped the PLL in locking up a little quicker and allowing the '2515 to stop when it "heard" a transmission.

When you do program the unit up it would also be a good idea to perhaps organise you banks in progressively increasing frequency areas.

You could scan a single bank or link any number of banks together.

Banks 63 to 78 were search banks where you could add a lower and upper limit together with mode and increment step to search between - again the unit was very fast compared to others but at times ran a little too fast for its own good. Having the "DELAY" on was usually a necessity.

The firmware used by ACE in the AR2515 was later used by AOR in the AR2500 receiver. The operating manual for the AR2600 is available on the AOR UK web site which may help.

http://www.aoruk.com/pdf/ar2500m.pdf

>The back of the scanner has a REMOTE plug??? must the remote plugged in to >receive?????? The REMOTE plug is not with the scanner???

ACE also changed the original "Remote" socket on the back of the radio to a 25 way RS232 serial connection. The original software released by ACE was produced by a firm called Gesmundo.

Hope that helps.

>> When you do program the unit up it would also be a good idea to perhaps organise you banks in progressively increasing frequency areas.

Although that's the way the scanner came preprogrammed from the factory, it is better to program the scanner with progressively lower frequency banks.

That is because the scanner scans each bank from highest to lowest frequency, but scans linked banks upward, numerically.

If you have bank one containing frequencies from 151 to 160 MHz, and bank two containing frequencies from 161 to 173 MHz, the scanner will scan bank one ... and end at 151 MHz ... then have to jump to 173 MHz to begin scanning bank two.

In that arrangement, there is more chance of missing active frequencies in the upper frequency range of bank two ... due to the frequency separation between 151 and 173 MHz.

The manual says that separation should be kept under 25 MHz., but I have noted missed active channels with less than 10 MHz separation.

Don't use GPS or PDA brackets unless you want to self destruct your scanner. GPS units are built ruggedly... Scanners are not. If you don't want to carry it on your belt, use some sort of padded case to absorb the vibration.

Iï¿½ve just started a new Yahoo group called RadioPriceFinder. The purpose is to share information on who has the best prices for Scanner, SWL, Ham Radio equipment and accessories.

Are you in the market of buying a new Scanner? SW Receiver? Antenna? Then post a question to the group such as ï¿½who has the price on the new Uniden XYZ scannerï¿½. Hopefully others will respond with prices theyï¿½ve recently seen or paid online. This should save many hours of websurfing to find the lowest prices.

Have you made a purchase and received bad customer care from the business you dealt with? Please LET everyone know so we donï¿½t fall into the same trap and buy from a bad business.

For more information on this group or to join you can go here: http://groups.yahoo.com/group/radiopricefinder.

To scribe you can simply send an email to: radiopricefinder-subscribe@yahoogroups.com

I quite agree.
Unfortunatly,a 14 year old radio shack frequency publication is neither.

The Fifth Edition disc that comes with the 2004 Police Call book would be worthless unless you had the book itself. After install it asks for a random word that appears somewhere in the book itself, such as "Enter the last word that appears on page 12" or "Enter the first word that appears on page 1" and so on.

The Third Edition however only asks for one key word any time you install it, but doesn't seem to install or run properly on a Windows XP system.

Might be interested if the price was $225 CDN. (which would be the base price if it was sold at $300.00 U.S.)

Note to Canadians:

Never buy from a fellow Canadian offering his own stuff in U.S. dollars. A person is making an additional 26% (because of the exchange) despite taking the cheque to the Royal Bank, Toronto Dominion, etc. and depositing it in his own chequing account. Insist on a Candian dollar price. There'sno need for the seller to insist on U.S.dollars on things that would be sold to a Canadian and sent to a Canadian postal coded address..

Buying from someone in the United States and paying U.S. prices is perfectly okay, but someone from Canada insisting on a U.S. price for his own things located here in Canada to a Canadian living in Canada is a bit of skimming off the top in my view. Not a bad way to legally make an extra 26% off the price of goods.

My Name is Rich I have opened up a Amateur Radio auction site at http://www.a2zedgifts.bidzfree.com/ It is intended for Amateur Radio (Ham Radio) Other categories listed also.

I have been a ham for over 40 years and have had many call signs, worked and lived all over the world. Now have settled down in NY and decided to try our hand at a branded auction site. A few years ago I opened A 2 Zed Gifts business. "A" being the first letter of the alphabet and Zed being the last letter of the alphabet. We were offering just about anything for sale.

For the past few months we were on eBay and just making it due to the high listing fees. The overhead was killing us. I noticed that one of the biggest auctions were Amateur Radio equipment. (I sold most of my station in a matter of days). With that in mind decided to join Bidzfree and open a branded auction site.

The following categories pertain to Amateur Radio (just click on a category and a subcategory will be shown)

Amateur Radio

Apparel

Business & Industrial

Books & Magazines

Collectables

Antiques & Art

Personalizing

Hobbies

Please come over and take a look.

Specifically, Staten Island, NY. On 462.600 MHZ in the GMRS band, there is a repeater group that calls themselves Blue Com or Blue Communications. They sound like an emergency service or response group, though usually only idle conversation is scarcely heard. Thoughout the day and night especially, the repeater sends time checks, automated call signs and the national sercurity level. They seem to have fairly wide coverage. The repeater states that it has been in service since 1997. I'm wondering if anyone has come across this group and could shed some light. Does anyone have anything on this? Thanks.

There are several inquiries about this group on several Yahoo groups, bulletin boards, and other GMRS-related venues. They claim to be good guys who are serving their community, but no one knows how they serve and who they are. They use bluecomm at yahoo as their email address, and queries to that address get replies from different people using aliases because of their line of work, whatever that is.

My impression is that it's some guys who have a fantasy about community service, but who do nothing.

Plug in a bunch of frequencies and listen to them. Delete what's not too active, and move on. However, don't moan when something big happens and they all go to "F2" and you don't have it programmed ! Experience is the only way you'll find out what you like or don't, go for it.

Similar groups on the West Coast as well, but use UHF LMR trunking and GMRS.

Don't do yourself a dis-service by taking the easy way out.
Find out the bands that public safety services typically operate - And scan.
Search. Find them nuggets yourself. Thats the only way you'll ever grow into the hobby.
Keep a log as you go along,writing down the freqs and what you think they are.
Enter the known good ones into memory - Enter the ones your not sure about into an experimental bank.
If you really must,just go to radio shack and get a copy of police call,but don't take it as gospel that thats all there is to listen to.

Doubt you can modify it for cell phone frequencies (almost all cell transmissions are now digital anyway). Cordless phone freqs can still be monitored in the typical 49 and 900 mhz ranges without modification. The cordless phones that operate in the Gigahertz ranges are obviously not able to be heard with this scanner.

This is all not to mention the fact that it's illegal in the US to intentionally monitor cellphone and cordless phone frequencies. :)

Your best bet would be to find a guy wearing sunglasses and an ear piece in a suit. I am sure he will be more than happy to give you all the frequencies

A friend of mine (yes, you UDP!) explained it quite simply. The non-human sounds used in signalling on the trunk system are stripped out by the audio cct designed to deliver human undertandable sounds to your ears. That's why you would need to tap in before the audio cct on most scanners.

Sucks eh...

You are right, and that explains my point.

Let's go through the exercise.

If I took his $300 US base price that he insists on, that would equal $404.16 CDN. $300 U.S. x 1.3472 exchange = $404.16 CDN. In other words I would pay out $404.16 CDN to meet his $300.00 US price. That is to say, that would be the transaction to process a bank draft in U.S. funds (fee extra)

So why would anyone in Canada spend an extra $104.16 for a transaction that really should be $300.00 CDN or perhaps less (perhaps a Canadian dollar price to Canadians? I wouldn't, simply because there is no real foriegn money required (he lives in Canada, not the United States and there fore does not take any financial penalty to convert the transaction from U.S. dollars to Canadian ones for depositing in his ordinary chequeing account.

I'm aware the US Dollar is worth more than ours, so why is he insisting on a U.S.price for Canadians as well?
I've seen this happen in hobby meets attended by Canadians in the U.S. when they want to sell to Canadians
(I mean really let's be a bit Canadian here, fellas!)

Why would a Canadian pay out $404.16 CDN to meet a $300.00 U.S. price? When he could just as easily say it's also $300.00 CDN.? (and save us $104.16?). I've said to some collectors, I can buy the same thing at home at the same price in Canadian dollars, so why buy in U.S.dollars when at the end of the day we're both checking in at Canada Customs on our way home to Canada?

Simple: $104.16. That for domestic transactions (as opposed to cross border transactions) doesn't need to exist.

If he says he has a U.S. account at the bank, well let him manage it with his own money, not mine.

Not a bad way to make an extra $104.16 on the deal if a Canadian buys it.

Just my two cents U.S. (three cents Canadian at current exchange)

Hello,

I'm interested in getting back into this hobby (after about a 25 year break). When I last had a scanner, we had to buy "crystals" for each frequency. Now, I see that there's a lot more choices.

I have started looking mostly at the Bearcat handhelds out there, but would like to hear from folks on their opinions on what to look for. I don't want to get something too complicated to learn to use. Is Trunk Tracking important? Can you basically just turn those scanners on and use them or is there a programming process to go through?

Also, of the Uniden models out there, are some becoming outdated (for example, I see the BC245 around, but it appears it's 4-5 years old now). Should I be looking to digital?

Thanks much for any and all tips. If any links to good scanner sites, that would be most helpful!

Thanks!

First off, it depends on what you intend on listening to. If there are no agencies that you are interested using a trunked system, there's no need for a trunking scanner, unless you're just planing for future changes in communications. If you're in an area like the county north of me, which uses mostly VHF frequencies, then an older scanner without so many features may be what you want. In my area, the State Police use an 800mhz trunked system and the Ocean County sheriff's dept dispatches some of the local police departments via a 400mhz trunked system. County EMS is on VHF and fire on 30mhz. The next town over uses a 500mhz digital system.

I would get a scanner that has a direct entry keypad and PC programming. Today's scanners come with so many channels and so many scanning options, it's easier to type it all in the computer and upload to the scanner. A scanner that can display an "AlphaTag" is another neccessity. This is usually a feature with a PC programmable scanner.

Another thing you have to consider is if you want a handheld or base. If you're using a handheld, then a scanner with "PL tone" or "CTCSS decoding" is probably not a feature you'd be concerned about unless there are multiple agencies close by that use the same frequency and you want to squelch some out. "PL Tones" would only be a concern if you're using it base and have it hooked up to an outdoor antenna. With that setup, you may here multiple agencies on the same frequency, such as we have here in NJ with the VHF EMS frequencies. It's not uncommon to hear Hunterdon County EMS dispatch on our Ocean County EMS VHF dispatch frequency (I hope that last paragraph isn't over your head! :)).

If you have any questions, please email me or reply here.

Dave,

You need to research some of the scanner websites for frequencies in your area, wherever you are. Is your community now using conventional UHF/VHF comms, or are they already EDACS or Motorola?

Some areas do not have digital transmissions yet; some may not have them for some time. If you are in a large metro area, NYC, Chicago, LA, Dallas etc, digital would be a good idea; TrunkTracking is mandatory.

I have both a base and a handheld. I am in the So Cal area that experienced the wildfires last October. My handheld saved our lives and some of my neighbors. So, both a base and a h/h have their benefits. Most "high end" scanners are now programmable with software/shareware or very affordable software that you can purchase. Dialing your scanner in through the use of your computer is really great!

Just depends on what your area is using now, city/county plans for updating their communications system[?] and how much you've want to invest in the hobby!

Here is one of the best sites to get you up to speed on what's happening in the industry:

Possibly might be having some aircraft carrier qualifiaction flights from Jacksonville to a carrier off the GA or FL coast. ï¿½Charlie Deltaï¿½ flights are up on 290.5000 & 362.4750 (used in the past for Air/Air on carrier qual. Flights). Also CDï¿½s are on 351.8000, 322.4000, 377.0500 (JAX Approach freqs). Also check out 267.5000 SEALORD for more CD flights.

About 10AM I thought a CD flight had decleared an IFE (in flight emergency) due to a fuel situation. Didnï¿½t have a good copy on this aircraft, anyone have a better copy on this this morning?

Iï¿½ve just started a new Yahoo group called RadioPriceFinder. The purpose is to share information on who has the best prices for Scanner, SWL, Ham Radio equipment and accessories.

Are you in the market of buying a new Scanner? SW Receiver? Antenna? Then post a question to the group such as ï¿½who has the price on the new Uniden XYZ scannerï¿½. Hopefully others will respond with prices theyï¿½ve recently seen or paid online. This should save many hours of websurfing to find the lowest prices.

Have you made a purchase and received bad customer care from the business you dealt with? Please LET everyone know so we donï¿½t fall into the same trap and buy from a bad business.

For more information on this group or to join you can go here: http://groups.yahoo.com/group/radiopricefinder.

To scribe you can simply send an email to: radiopricefinder-subscribe@yahoogroups.com

Friday, April 16th, 2004 to follow in 5-4-3-2-1.

The following is a Q-S-T. Iraqi hams put out a plea to keep ham radio

A PLEA FROM A WAR ZONE: PLEASE HELP HAM RADIO SURVIVE IN IRAQ

Even as the bloodshed continues, hams in Iraq are asking their counterparts world-wide to keep Amateur Radio alive in the war torn nation. Amateur Radio Newsline's Bruce Tennant, K6PZW has more:

A widely publicized e-mail from Laith Adhary, YI1SRA, in Baghdad asks the worlds radio amateurs for support in keeping ham radio a part of a new Iraq. This, as the June 30th date for handover of the government to local authorities approaches.

Adhary is a member of the Iraqi Association for Radio Amateurs and works at the University in Baghdad. He says that it is urgent that Iraq establish a viable ham radio program in the country before the shift of governing takes place. To accomplish this, Laith and Iraqi Association for Radio Amateurs president Diya Sayah, YI1DZ are asking hams around the globe to and their national societies to a letter of support for the future of the hobby in Iraq.

Both men indicate that this is a time sensitive issue and request support right away.

With thanks to Ian Abel, G3ZHI, for passing the information along,
I'm Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, reporting for the Amateur Radio Newsline.

The best way to make sure your letter of support arrives is to send it by E-mail We have two addresses. Sayah can be reached at

THE BPL WAR: ARRL ASKS FOR FILING DEADLINE EXTENSION IN BPL NPRM

Back here in the United States, the ARRL has asked the FCC to extend the deadline for comments and reply comments by 45 days in the Broadband over Power Line Notice of Proposed Rule Making. Thats E-T Docket 04-37.

The ARRL filing says that it anticipates the National Telecommunications and Information Administration report on B-P-L to go public on or around April 16th. Also, that the current deadline would allow only a couple of weeks at best to evaluate the study's results and incorporate its findings into comments in the proceeding.

Although the FCC does not routinely grant such extensions, the ARRL says that it is important to allow time for the N-T-I-A to conclude its study at B-P-L field trial locations. Unless the extension is granted, the last day to file comments is May 3rd and reply comments is June 1st. (ARRL Bulletin)

THE BPL FIGHT: SWL'S VS. BROADBAND OVER POWERLINES

Short-wave listeners can complain to the FCC if a Broadband Over Powerline installation interferes with their reception, but there are some caveats. Amateur Radio Newsline's Gary Pearce, KN4AQ, has the rest of the story:

Progress Energy has made a concerted effort to move BPL signals out of the ham bands in their trial areas near Raleigh, North Carolina. But the systems, which are governed by FCC Part 15 and are prohibited from interfering with licensed services, are still radiating signals across much of the rest of the short-wave spectrum. That's leading short-wave listeners to ask if they have "standing" to complain to the FCC, since they don't have licenses themselves.

The - General Council Chris Imlay W3KD says they do, if the BPL signals are interfering with international shortwave broadcasts from other countries, but not if they are trying to listen to domestic shortwave broadcasters. Replying to an e-mail inquiry, Imlay adds that "One does not have to be a licensee of a transmitter in order to receive harmful interference."

ARRL Chief Executive Officer David Sumner K1ZZ noted that the US is a member of the International Telecommunications Union, whose Radio Regulations require member nations to protect HF communications from harmful interference.

RR 15.12 reads, "Administrations shall take all practicable and necessary steps to ensure that the operation of electrical apparatus or installations of any kind, including power and telecommunication distribution networks, do not cause harmful interference to a radiocommunication service operating in accordance with the provisions of these Regulations."

Reporting for Newsline, this is Gary Pearce KN4AQ, in Raleigh, North Carolina.

The bottom line: If you are trying to listen to Radio Netherlands and a Broadband Over Powerline installation covers the station up -- complain to the FCC. (KN4AQ, ARNewsline(tm))

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: EXPEDITION 9 HEADED TO THE ISS

The International Space Station's next set of ham radio residents will arrive this month. Expedition 9 Commander Gennady Padalka and Flight Engineer Mike Fincke are slated to launch to orbit from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in Kazakhstan on April 18. They will arrive at the I-S-S on April 21 to replace Expedition 8 explorers Mike Foale, KB5UAC, and Sasha Kaleri, U8MIR.

Padalka is a space flight veteran having spent 198 days aboard the Russian Mir space station in 1999. On the other hand, Expedition 9 is Fincke's first trip to space. Both are hams. Fincke holds the call sign KE5AIT and Padalka is RN3DT.

European Space Agency Astronaut Andr&#65533; Kuipers will also travel to the Station with Fincke and Padalka and return to Earth with Expedition 8 about nine days later. Padalka and Fincke will then spend about six months on-orbit. Their tasks include maintaining ISS operations, continuing science operations, conducting two spacewalks and operating the ham radio station as time permits. Their tour of duty is scheduled to end in late October when the Expedition 10 crew rockets up to replace them. (ANS, ARISS, MAREX)

RESCUE RADIO: PHONE TUNNEL FIRE BRINGS HAM RADIO CALLOUT

Raynet -- the United Kingdom's version of RACES -- was called on as March drew to a close. This, as fire rips through a tunnel carrying telephone lines across a wide area. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, is in Nottingham, with more:

Raynet groups in Cheshire, Greater Manchester and Derbyshire were put on standby following a fire in a BT underground tunnel in central Manchester in the early hours of Monday the 29th of March. The fire disrupted more than 130,000 telephone lines in Lancashire, Merseyside, Derbyshire and further afield. Cheshire Police were concerned about the effects on communications, and via the Cheshire Emergency Planning Department requested the availability of Raynet operators to cover the affected area.

The Greater Manchester ambulance service lost landline and radio communications with their vehicles, but were able to use mobile phones as a means of contact. Other difficulties included a loss of 999 calls and disruption to the broadband data network. Large areas of the High Peak area of Derbyshire were without landlines or mobile phones.

Jeramy Boot, G4NJH.

The majority of Raynet members were dismissed by the evening of March 29th, but the Cheshire Group and County Controllers were on call through Wednesday afternoon the 31st. Thats when the emergency call in 999 service was finally restored to the worst-affected area of Cheshire. (GB2RS)

RESCUE RADIO: TV CHANNEL 16 GOES TO PUBLIC SAFETY AGENCIES IN NYC

On this side of the Atlantic pond the FCC has permanently reallocated 482 to 488 MHz in the New York City metropolitan area to the land-mobile service. This, for public safety communications.

482 to 488 MHz which is also known as UHF television Channel 16 has been used in New York for that purpose since 1995 when the FCC issued a Conditional Waiver of its rules to permit the initial operation.

RADIO RULES: BY-BY FORMS

And a change of forms at the FCC. Effective with Monday, May 3, the Wireless Telecommunications Bureau will dismiss any applications filed on an FCC Form 605 issued earlier than December 2003.

Form 605, the Quick-Form Application for Authorization in the Ship, Aircraft, Amateur, Restricted and Commercial Operator, and General Mobile Radio Service, is the hard-copy version of the Amateur Service application. The FCC has been accepting both older and current Form 605 applications that included room for a Taxpayer Identification Number or a Social Security number. The FCC would then issue the applicant an FCC Registration Number or F-R-N without additional paperwork.

All amateur service applicants must have and use an F-R-N when filing an application such as Form 605 with the FCC. The change does not affect applicants filing on-line with the Universal Licensing System. (ARRL Bulletin)

ENFORCEMENT: NEVER UNDERESTIMATE THE VALUE OF CB RADIO

Turning to the enforcement arena, never underestimate the value of an 11 meter Class D C-B radio set in catching a bad guy. Even when the alleged perpetrator happens to be the C-B operator at the controls. Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, has the details:

According to the CGC Communicator, complaints about interference from a citizens band radio led police to the home of one Vernando Malone of South Bend, Indiana. When they searched the premises they found more than $20,000 worth of Nextel cellular telephones and another $20,000 in Motorola phones. Also located was a computer that Malone allegedly used to activate the phones

Malone has now been charged with forgery and theft. This, in connection with what police claim was scheme to fraudulently order large numbers of cell phones, activate them with a home computer, and then sell them on the street at discounted prices.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, in Los

TECHNOLOGY: KNRC AM IN COLORADO TURNS OFF IBOC

A broadcaster has shut down its A-M stereo system to avoid interfering with listeners of another near-by station. KNRC A-M on 1150 kHz in Littleton, Colorado, turned off the I-B-O-C or High Definition Radio encoding equipment in response to listener complaints of interference to the signal of KJJD, on 1170 kHz in the town of Windsor.

Rodger Tighe writing in the CGC Communicator calls this is a second adjacent channel situation. He reports that part of the decision to silence I-B-O-C was based on the thinking that interference to a small mom & pop station like KJJD was totally unwarranted since consumers have so few H-D radios in their hands at this time.

Tighe is the Chief Engineer of KNRC. He says that the I-B-O-C encoding equipment is still in the racks and the whole issue could be revisited at a later date. (CGC)

THAT FINAL ITEM: WORLD CLASS T-HUNTING - PART 1

And finally, a question. Have you tried ham radio's version of fox hunting? It's not hard and you might win yourself some medals. Newsline's Joe Moell K0OV has the story of the next Amateur Radio direction finding championships:

Most hams know that in Amateur Radio, the term "foxhunt" doesn't have anything to do with horses or hound dogs. Our foxes are radio transmitters and the object of the hunt is to find them with radio direction finding equipment. But what many hams don't know is that the equipment for hunting radio foxes can be very simple and inexpensive. For a two-meter foxhunt in the park on foot, you can do very well by augmenting your handi-talkie with a simple yagi antenna made out of a steel measuring tape and some PVC pipe from the hardware store. For closing in, build an offset-type RF attenuator for about 15 dollars worth of small parts. Plans are on the Web, so warm up your soldering iron. Then maybe you could be like Newsline's Young Ham of the Year Jay Thompson W6JAY, who has won a place on our country's team to the World ARDF Championships. You don't have to be a super-athlete, just reasonably fit.

To see the USA's best on-foot foxhunters in action, to learn from them, and to try it for yourself, make plans to come to southern California this June. The Fourth USA ARDF Championships get under way on June 16th, with practice sessions, a big two-meter hunt, and another hunt on 80 meters. Come out the weekend before, and you can take part in an optional intensive training camp. It's all being put on by the Santa Barbara Amateur Radio Club and it's open to anyone at any foxhunting skill level, with or without a ham license. If you're a senior, don't worry about trying to compete with W6JAY. Equal medals will be awarded in five separate age category for OM's from under 18 to over 60. There are four similar age categories for the YLs.

Thanks very much all for your suggestions and information. It's very useful to learn this! I'm in the SF Bay Area, by the way. Anyone know if this area requires Trunktracking or digital?

I've seen the Bearcat BC250 handheld advertised.. It appears to have the capability to upgrade to digital. Anyone have any experience with this model? Is it worth getting a digital-ready scanner like this (looks like the digital card is another few hundred bucks). I'm wondering whether these were just an interim solution to the digital market? Or is it a worthwhile investment?

Thanks for any info!

Dave

That might depend on where you are in the Bay, and what you want to hear. For example, I'm in Santa Clara, and the city's system (PD, Fire, etc.) is an 800 MHz Motorola trunked system.

San Francisco (city and county) uses a mixed (analog and digital) 800
MHz trunked system.

The Santa Clara County Sheriff isn't trunked, but it's digital.

Alameda County uses a Motorola analog trunked system.

A good resource to see what's trunked near you is:
http://www.radioreference.com/modules.php?name=RR&stid=6 (click on the county names to see the various trunked systems in use).

It's likely that you will need a trunk-tracking scanner.

To listen to anything digital, you'll need one of the digital models.
At the moment, your choices are:
Uniden 250 or 785 (with optional digital card)
Uniden 296 or 796 (digital card included)
RadioShack PRO-96
The message boards at www.strongsignals.net should be a good place to check the features of the above radios.

Possible, but what he is selling is used goods and would not equate the $700.00 CDN price. The U.S.equivalent would be $525.U.S. His price is $300.00 U.S., still not a bad deal.

But even at $300.00 U.S. he's still making an additional $104.16 off a Canadian who buys it if he insists on a $U.S. price for Canadians.

It still remains, why would a Canadian insist on a U.S. price to a fellow Canadian if that is a firm price? Not a bad way to make an extra $104.16.
Cost of living up here is high enough as it is without someone profiteering off the exchange on the backs of fellow citizens.

Simply wouldn't do it myself.

Just my two cents (three cents Canadian at current exchange).

No... the 245 uses an actual belt clip that's screwed to the back of the radio. The 250's belt clip is really a seperate part that's independent of the radio. It "snaps" on the back of the radio by four small tabs that settle into four small slots on the side of the radio, two on each side. For what it's worth, I haven't found anyone yet who trusts the 250's clip enought to actually use it. It has a feel that with the right bump, your precious radio will fall to the floor.

The 296 will do 9600 baud digital trunked systems vs. 3600 baud for the 250. I don't think there are too many 9600 systems out there yet.
Even LAPD uses 3600 baud.

That is a pretty broad question. Aside from "talking" - what is the USE? Delivery truck? Tow truck? You get the picture? What sort of service are these radios going to serve? Mobile or portable operation? Is a Base involved? What is the frequency range of intended use? Power level needed perhaps - terrain of land - whether or not a repeater may be incorporated in your use, options desired, and so on. "IF" you do not have a license for a 2 way radio set up, it isn't just a deal of installing them and getting on the air. You must apply for the license - which isn't exactly cheap. You may have to go through an Agency to get them to file the paperwork for you which is additional expense. Furthermore, the frequency range you pick, may not be allocated for the use "you" intend. As such, the agency doing the paperwork and/or the FCC won't allow the license to be issued. The radios are only part of the project, you got some homework to do if you're starting out from scratch. To NOT have a license, you face a fine of at least $7000 and it will be carried out if caught. I know of EMS services who've been fined for not having a license in effect. I know this may have been a bit more or harsh than you wanted to hear, but hey.... better to be safe than sorry! If you're going to do it, do it "right". Depending on your needs, there are some radios which require no license, but the coverage and options may be limited too! So.... you have to do your homework.

You know, this "Health Hazard" bit is getting old. BPL, if implemented, would be limited to the restrictions of part 15. This means no output power levels in excess of 100 milliwatts. You get way more than that every time you press your cell phone to the side of your head and press the talk button
...... Now, if you think your cell phone is safe and will not cause cancer, why is it that you keep insisting that a power line even 30 feet away is going to cause it ?

Hello:

New at this.

Have a large listing of airline freq's used at Logan in Boston.

They are generally:

a. 450.xxx - 470.xxx

b. 897.xxx

c. 936.xxx

d. and ARINC freq's around 130.xxx

Not at all sure if these are air to ground, or just ground handling freq's.
What do you think ?

For (a), (b), (c), and (d), what modes should I program my 780 for ?

My Butel software automatically pegged them all as NFM, but if they are (?) air to ground, wouldn't they be AM ?

Much thanks,
Bob

Yep, That's what I do. Peg the price in Canadian dollars not U.S. ones.

Exactly.

Screw NAFTA's supporters. It's a good concept, but..

NAFTA doesn't work 100% of the time anyway. Example:

The yanks have slapped a 25% tariff on Canadian lumber (which comes mostly from British Columbia), just to appease the producers of wood from southern Georgia. Why because them Georgians can't compete against the higher quality lumber and volume of production of that lumber from Canada and they figure George Dubya should protect them. Which he did.

Free Trade means just that. Free Trade.No tariffs or other imposed duties on cross border movement of goods.
If the U.S. really made NAFTA work the way it is supposed to, they would not have slapped a 25% duty on lumber products from Canada.

Example:

Canada imports college football players to the Canadian Football League.

In return, Canada exports hockey players to the NHL.

No duties or penalties.

When you choose, you discriminate <bg>

Canadian

If it is a Canadian selling an item to another Canadian, the Yanks never enter the picture, so nothing is taken from the Yanks. You think I'm going to buy local stuff here in Canada with U.S.dollars?

For something that is $U.S. 20, I end up paying $27.00 Canadian for, so why would I if the item is here in Canada.
Should be able to get it for $20.00 Canadian. I peg my prices on Canadian dollars, not U.S. ones. His error was peging the price in U.S. dollars. No Timbits for him from me on that one.
<grin>

Anyway, 'nuff said.

Strong American homes like yours need strong and durable building materials that are long lasting and enhance beauty.
Insist on lumber products made in British Columbia wherever lumber is sold.

Just my two cents (three cents Canadian at current exchange)

Please help. I just bought a BC-250D the other day. I am having trouble programing NJSP trunked in it.

I have the freqs for Troop C, put them in as type 2 800, but do not do anything.

I shouldn't have to put in the talkgroups and then get all of them?

If I am wrong what should I set it as? Talk Group location? ID?

I never had trunk tracker, and I am lost. I eventually want to have one bank for troop A, one for troop B, and one for troop C, but living in monmouth county i thought I should use tyroop C first.

Monday I am going to FT Lauderdale for a couple of days and want to listen to their trunked.

But, please help with NJSP. LOL.

I'm wondering if anyone knows the actual QCII (two tone) code that was used to page out Squad 51 on the old Emergency TV show?

Sure, I've downloaded the wav file, but I'm looking for the actual frequency of those tones. For example 600.1 Hz followed by 1472.5 Hz. Or it could be shown as 170 + 171 possibly even B01. Surf over to www.batlabs.com if you want to learn more.

Anyway, If not that, does anyone have a software program that would play the wav file and give up the answer as to what tones are used for thier station page?

Thanks

Try Goldwave, it should have a spectrum analyzer / FFT tool.

Hi,

I just purchased a Undien BC 796D scanner. The unit is in the bedroom and connected to my living room stereo with about 50' of shielded audio cable.
This setup worked just fine with my old scanner. But since upgrading,
I can barley hear the audio with the stereo turned all the way up.

Here is what I've done so far to troubleshoot the problem:

Connect "line out" of a portable CD player to the cable -- worked fine Connect a set of high-imp. headphones to the "tape out" jack of the scanner -- worked fine

And suggestions would be greatly appreciated.

Thanks, Bob <BobWadd@comcast.net>

PS - Yes, the "record" setting is turned on for the desired channels.

The line output jack will have plenty of audio if you turn up the volume control on the radio. For some reason Uniden thought it was a good idea to make the line output vary with the volume control setting. There should be no need for a preamp.

The record out jack on my BC796D only operates if you program the radio to turn that jack on for a specific channel. If you wanted to hear all channels you have to program the radio to turn it on for every channel ? COuld the jack be muted ?

More information needs to be known before anyone can suggest a scanner.

1. What frequency ranges will you be listening to?
2. Will you need to listen to trunked or digital transmissions?
3. How many channels are the minimum?
4. Do you need AM capabilities? (Listening to air band?)

Trade Radio Shack PRO-2004 Wide Band Scanner for good Table top Shortwave receiver like the Drake SW2 or Bearcat DX1000 or Kenwood R1000, etc.

The 2004 covers from 25 MHz to 520 MHz and 760 MHz to 1300 MHz with no gaps and is still considered one of the best base full coverage scanners made and can be compared to the ICOM R7000.

Jim, look at the Radio Shack Pro-95 if you don't need digital capabilities. It's relatively inexpensive, easy to program with free/shareware software, and works on trunked and non-trunked systems. If it's not what you want, RS has a good return policy. If you don't need trunked, RS sells even cheaper scanners.

DRC, Got a list of frequencies for your area? I'll be in Harrison next week.

Thanks for the responses so far. I do have ICF-2010 for HF and Air Band coverage. I am mostly interested in the encrypted transmissions.
I guess any normal scanner would pick up FM/AM/SSB modes. I don't want to just hear hiss or crackles on 440.650 MHz for instance.

2352. Police Radar Questions.

The police radar guns work off the doppler affect (for radar guns) or the change in distance between pulses for lidar. My question is how they account for angle, can a police officer who is at a 87 degree angle correctly measure your speed? It should only work going straight at or away from. Also, do the police always have their gun on? Because it detects driving police cars who arn't shooting radar to my visibility, does that just mean that the vehicle has an installed radar gun constantly giving speeds?. And how would that account for angle? If you know of a good website I can read please tell me.

This is so close to being perpendicular I doubt a radar would show any speed at all.

It should only work going straight > at or away from.

Police radar works on the premise of relative motion. The object being tracked and the radar unit must be moving towards or away from each other.

Also, do the police always have their gun on?

Depends. Some officers leave them on constantly. Some others use the "hold" feature (turning of the transmitter)

> Because it detects driving police cars who arn't shooting radar to my > visibility, does that just mean that the vehicle has an installed > radar gun constantly giving speeds?

I don't know what you are asking here.

. And how would that account for > angle? If you know of a good website I can read please tell me.

Police radar relies on relative motion to read the speed. Either the radar must be moving towards or away from the object or the object must be moving towards or away from the radar. If the object being checked is perpendicular to the radar, it will not show a speed. The greater the angle to the radar (closer to perpendicular), the less the speed will be shown.

I am speaking strictly about a radar that is operated in the "stationary only" mode and not same or opposite direction moving radar, there are other issues involved with those modes.

Look up the 'cosine effect' in relation to traffic radar.

No, he cannot accurately measure your speed unless you're directly in line with him, however errors from radar at an angle are all in favor of the motorist, so there's no point arguing in court. The officer's radar gun will read a lower speed than you were going unless you are traveling straight towards him or straight away.

> It should only work going straight at or away from.

Right. But again, errors are in favor of the motorist.

And, frankly, it doesn't matter. The officer's claim and educated opinion based on experience and training is what matters, especially in court. The radar is only a tool. A competent police officer can glance at you driving by and know your speed within a small margin.
The radar just confirms it.

> Also, do the police always have their gun on?

Usually not.

Radar is dying in favor of Lidar, esp X band.

A lot of things false trigger radar detectors. Radar can reflect off overhead signs and over hills where it may trip your detector even though the radar operator doesn't have a line of sight on you and couldn't get a reading. Burglar alarm microwave motion detectors and automatic door openers at supermarkets almost always operate on X band and will trip radar detectors to a significant distance. Most people regularly driving a route will learn these areas. These signals always are present.

There are a very few instances where communities have taken used/obsolete radar equipment and locked it in transmit to try to slow down traffic near construction sites, schools or residential areas. An experienced user of a radar detector will spot these immediately.

Do some Google searching and you'll find a week's worth of reading on these matters.

Hi group,

Found the problem last night. It turns out the "tape out" jack is stereo (2 cond w/ground), I was using a mono plug (1 cond w/ ground).
This caused the output of the scanner to be shorted. Changed the plug to stereo, problem solved.

Just thought I'd pass this info along.

Thanks, Bob

PS - Thanks to the person that e-mailed me today confirming this.

Most scanners do not handle SSB mode. That's generally only available on communications receivers, HF ham transceivers or higher-priced wide-band handheld receivers like the Yaesu VR-500 or AOR AR8200. SSB is rarely, if ever, used on VHF/UHF, so typical VHF/UHF scanners have only AM/FM/WFM modes, and sometimes they don't even have WFM--for instance, the PRO-95 doesn't have it. If you need trunking capability, I agree that the PRO-95 would be a good choice as long as you don't need FM broadcast or TV audio.

I use SSB on 2m (the low 144's) and 70cm (around 430.000), as do a lot of

It's an internet scam. The scammer sends you a MO, which you cash. You keep a percentage and send the some, then it turns out the MO is fake. From what the original poster is saying, there are people posting scanners for sale in order to collect email addresses to send these scams to.

True enough...however I would still consider that "rare" from the perspective of someone interested in scanning, and it is true that most VHF/UHF scanners don't offer SSB. Hams that operate those bands on SSB generally have a different class of rig altogether. I often monitor the SSB sub-band on 2m with a communications receiver and an outdoor 2m antenna mounted above the house, and I've never heard a thing...I consider that rare. YMMV.

Hi, I guess I will be the new kid on the block for a while. Just bought on ebay a Uniden BC250D ... used indoors for a week for $230. I think I made a good purchase. ANY WAY ...

I am not completely new to scanners. Had one, several times in the past, but now things are changing .. there is this trunking going on. And then software for the scanners, to load saved stations I think ... and then digital .. NOT ONLY THAT .. but my cellphone stuff has been removed, before I learned how to modify them. Can you even modify scanners if they are digital ?? Or if they have digital capabilities do I need them ??

I am a gadget nut, so I had to have the digital .. had to have the software capable ... I do think the trunking was necessary, but the rest ?? I don't know. ALSO, liked the color of the display .. actually I have only seen one picture of the scanner, it hasn't been shipped to me yet. I am like a kid at Christmas.

Any help or pointers would be greatly appreciated. Or if you are a rambler or a bragger or want to tell me what a great choice I made, I would love to hear it all. BY THE WAY ... I am in Deltona, Florida .. Volusia County. Guess mostly I need to find the software ?? Or do I need a card first ? and if someone is from around here and would like to modify the scanner for me .. I would sure appreciate it.

Basically .. I am on the computer day and night and not much of a TV watcher. Used to listen to my old beat up scanner while I worked on the computer - I design websites. Then one day, this goes way back .. they started the trunking thing .. . I never invested in another one until today. First I looked at everyone I could find but decided on this .. I HOPE I DIDN'T MAKE A MISTAKE. I should have checked here first maybe .. but I am impulsive.

Well first off the answer is no when it comes to modding the radio for cell. Next thing is, did you get the digital card to go with the radio? If not then you wont be able to use the digital features of the radio. You should have went for the BC296 or the PRO-96 if you wanted digital capabilities.

I didn't get the card .. I don't know if I need good thing to have.

As far as the modifying. Are you saying NO that these cannot be modified ? If so .. just curious

?? It isn't high on my list of priorities. But as I get older I become more and more of a busy body

Any way .. I needed trunking .. and I thought so far I am clueless as to it's purpose.

No the scanner cannot be modded for cell. This has nothing to do with it being digital but because it is illegal to sell a cell capable radio in the US. You can go here( http://strongsignals.net/access/boards/boards.cgi ) and learn a lot about your new radio. There you will find out everything you want to know about the radio.

I have a new (meaning never hooked up or programmed) in the box with everything that Radio Shack put in this box. I purchased it when they were closing them out (aprox a year and a half ago) for either $169 or $179 and have discovered that I really didn't need it. I'll ship any place in the continental U.S.(48 states only) for $150. RM~

PS, I've seen them bring near that used on ebay plus shipping.

I was tempted to consider this model. However, it doesn't have total coverage in frequency range. My other choice would be ICOM R5 due to its small size and total coverage (less cellular). If I do get R5, then would I not be able to listen to trunked signals?

If everyone starts using trunked, then buying scanner that wouldn't decode trunked signals would be a bad investment. Once again, I want to buy a scanner that decodes "most" signals surrounding my periphery.
Who gave them right to invade my space with their stealth signals?

You may want to reconsider the PRO-95 if you want to listen to a trunking system. The US R5 has a good portion of the 800 band blocked and may keep you from hearing the trunking freqs in your area. If it does let you hear them, you still will not be able to follow the conversations.

Hi, I am teaching at a local High School in Kingston Ontario we were looking for any equipment that could be borrowed, loaned or given away, there is many children here looking into the world or radio, they first set up a CB radio but I can tell you its the worst thing they could have ever done, just too many foul mouthed punks out on that thing. Any help would be big help.....

Not really, have too many scanners right now and find myself listening to them less and less. I'm toying with the idea of parting with my 2006 (it's like a family member) and a mint condition Bearcat IV (with VHF low, VHF hi and the UHF front ends, don't have the AM aircraft board) which were both purchased new. I'm in the Tulsa area if any one wants to have a look. RM~

PS, going to get rid of a RS DX302 and a Sony 2001 and quite a few other items as soon as I can locate them, they are still packed from a move 2 years ago.

If you decide to go down on the price then let me know. What they go for on ebay really don't me anything since people will pay way to much there. You could get a new 2067 for $150 when they still had them. Don't get me wrong, I'm not ragging on your price, I myself just wouldn't pay the same price for a used radio as it was new. I will offer you $125 shipped if your interested.

Just wondering if there are any people in this NG from or near Deltona Fl who could maybe give me some pointers, should I need them whenever my scanner gets here. Had one before - one of the simple ones - before computer anything came along ... before trunking existed.

Anyone know, how's the manual for the BC250D,
Hoping it explains stuff as if I were a child
.. maybe there is a scanner's for dummies

not neccessarily.
its a known fact that even though they made the no-code tech license, not all the fould mouth punks decided to move up to ham vhf and above. in fact, a large number of them remained right where they were because they didn't want to have "big brother" staring over their shoulder at anything they did.

I personally started out on CB, but decided that ham was a better opportunity for me to make new friends and speak with new poeple. I also got tired of all the games and other such non-sense that took place down there.

unfortunately, there are some on the simplex frequencies right ere in phoenix who must continue to plays these games, even though they are considered to be very bad form!. one comment made last night by an unidentified individula stated this "you mean you need a license to operate this thing?" I know it was sarcastic, and it got completely ignored by those of use who were conversing on the frequency at the time This is the proper proceedure when dealing with unlicensed fools!).

Hey, why don't you call the guy and see if he can sell you something.
Why are there always A-hole know it all jerks like yourself who always have crap to put on these groups?? The guy only wanted to warn others of another kind of jerk that took his money. If you ever got burned like this you would be the first to post the guy who ripped you off and cry

Ok I guess you guys have problems also, but is there any place where I can buy used equipment other than Ebay, we tried that and bought junk.

a local hamfest or 2 couldn't hurt (do you have those where you are?).

also, check the local papers for estate sales of SK hams. it also isn't a Golly gee wiz, such bad language from you. If your mommy knew you used those bad words she would wash out your mouth with soap. It's funny, when a grown-up says something to you that you don't like you go into a rage. I bet you did a body slam to the floor and kicked and screamed too. OK little lad, be a good boy now and go learn something, for a change. Maybe you will grow up to be a fine person and not a bully, not likely but you can try. And don't forget to eat fish, it will help your brain!! You should eat a whale, but oops, that is not a fish. Bet you did not know that!

And by the way why are you're crying about this thread and cross posting? You do the same thing! It started out by giving great info to people that needed to be warned about a crook. It is YOU who made it grow with your crap. Grow up will you??
Bye Bye, you're filtered out.
To the group, I'm sorry for taking up space here with this child but sometimes a moron needs a helping hand so he can grow.
Anyone care to comment on this child?? Nah, don't waste your time, the lad is not worth it.

have you cracked the display? or something physical? or has it just got

if so, it is repairable, the conductive strip moves & makes it go funny

It was cracked, I am repairing for my neighbor. The unit works fine, receives trunked and conventional perfect, just has lost the bottom line.
I am actually surprised it works at all (the LCD), the crack is substantial.

It sounds like you need to reset the scanner and reprogram it.
manual + 2 + 9 keys depressed when you turn the scanner on will reset the scanner.
Here is a interface program that can also allow you to more easily program the radio in case you have to reset it.

Hi

i'm after a cheap outdoor aerial for my old scanner, nothing special just something to use to listen around the 450mhz range, i've seen http://www.maplin.co.uk/products/module.asp?CartID=040428145712648&moduleno=29613&Products which looks ok, but was just wondering if a whip would do the trick, i think i saw somewhere someone who made something similar to the maplin one out of a plastic pipe and a lot of telephone bell wire wound round it dont really want to spend that much money on it as i'll probably get bored again in a few months time and put it back in the loft!

2432. Uninformed listener seeks handheld scanner advice

I'll call myself an "uninformed" listener because I have very little knowledge of modern scanners.

Our local PD/FD/EMS have moved to 800 MHz trunked systems (still a little PD activity on VHF-High at the moment, but not much). My four scanners are now obsolete. I need to be able to listen to trunked and non-trunked signals, plus airband AM signals. A handheld would be best. I have looked at the Radio Shack models, and also the Uniden BC245XLT. I am open to suggestions on something that might fill my needs.

Guess I'll dump my old ones on eBay. They'd be fine for anyone who doesn't have to deal with trunked systems.

If it is just that one range, you might try making a J-Pole for that frequency. You get a couple of db gain over a 1/4 wave whip.

http://www.packetradio.com/jpol.htm

Since you're not transmitting you don't need to worry about any fine tuning.

Don't bother it came with ny PCR-1000 and the software is crap. Resource and memory hog, has a memory leak, they have never fixed. Support is non exsistent. If this is for a PCR-1000, take a look at Talk PCR and various sound card software such as MixW .

Advocating something is one thing

Advocating the advocacy of an illegal criminal act is another. Having the proximity and ability to carry out a "call for violence" is a criminal act in itself.

You can "opine" that the dumb asshole "should be" taught a lesson.

You cannot advocate any action that causes it to happen.

I have downloaded this program and tried it, but i am still not getting something. The ID Groups from frequency bank 2 are showing up on frequency bank 1. There are other things that are happening that are strange too. I like the idea of the program, but I dont think that its working right for me. Any Ideas? Michael

I sent R.G. a congratulatiory e-mail for having the balls to speak out and speak up with a voice of dissent.
Not because I do not feel sorry for PT's family.
I do. I congratulate him for exercizing a voice of conjecture in this kooky World.

On a related topic, I would like to know what Bush and Blair think of their respective military personnel, seeing how now both the USA's and the UK's reputation are now totally in the toilet with the world opinion, concerning published photos of mis-treatment of Iraqi prisoners, in a clear violation of the Geneva Convention Protocols regarding the same.

Will Bush and Blair (the UK "poodle dog") just brush this one aside with a smile?

I mean, jeezus freakin h christ riding on a fleabitten camel in Kuwait someplace!

Just one look at these new photos will provide ample evidence as to why Islamics and Middle Eastern people hate the US and the UK almost as much as they do the State of Israel.

Relax. Universities exist outside of the reality continuum. The professors are so liberal that what they think doesn't have any basis in what actually happens. They're so far left, they've left the spacetime continuum. The sad thing is that the students, who are trying to find their identity for the first time in their life, latch on to this twisted neo-60s view of life and start espousing 35 year old Marxist platitudes. If I cared what they think, I'd listen to Radio Havana.

I am selling my Radio Shack Pro-96 scanner. This one is in brand new condition, used very little. Includes box, manual, all accessories. Also includes soft leather case. Great scanner, but I don't use it as there is currently minimal digital communications in northern NJ. My 245 XLT suits my needs for now.

$450.00 shipped via UPS ground, insured.

I will accept a US Postal money order or PAYPAL only. No personal checks or other money orders or forms of payment.

Check my eBay feedback under OFFDAN.

If interested, reply via E-MAIL!!!

One of the true heros in the war on terrorism. A former pro football star that gave up a 3.5 million dollar contract to serve his country (without fanfare, it must be added). He was recently killed in action in Afghanistan.
He was posthumously awarded a promotion to corporal.. so he didn't even go in as an officer, just a regular enlisted stiff. These are the people I respect, even if in some circumstances I may not agree with their being where they are (Afghanistan is not one of those, however). He's receiving way more attention than he would have wanted.. but I feel the recognition is appropriate. I think that all those who die in the service of our country should receive the same wide recognition.

I totally agree. Pat did what he believed was right and didn't care about the money. As for this Gonzalez, maybe he is an illegal Mexican and we can take his green card that he probably got with a fake ID

The Bush-Clinton Administrations Had Enough Information Before 9/11 to Prevent Aircraft from Becoming Missiles

Washington, DC:

Independent Presidential Candidate Ralph Nader today urged the 9/11 Commission to highlight the failure of the Bush and Clinton Administrations to take action to re-enforce the doors of aircraft cockpits noting: "This single safety step could have thwarted the events of September 11."

On April 8, when Condolezza Rice testified before the Commission Investigating September 11, she acknowledged that hardening the cockpits could have made a difference: "That would have made a difference. We weren't going to harden cockpits in the three months that we had a threat spike."

In fact, the US government had more than enough information prior to the information generated in the months prior to 9/11 to have taken action to re-enforce cockpit doors to thwart hijackers and terrorists. In addition to official intelligence scenarios about the potential for hijacked planes being used in terrorist attacks in the US against buildings, there have been 167 hijackings involving US airlines and 11 hijackings involving foreign airlines on US soil since 1970.

"It has been evident for decades that we needed to harden cockpit doors and strengthen their latches. Some foreign airlines have installed just that safeguard. The failure of the federal government for years to address this despite clear evidence of the need is a tribute to how our government has deregulated mechanisms for national security. The resistance by airlines and aircraft manufacturers sent the soporific FAA into inaction, despite long time requests for action by safety groups and aviation security experts. If our government, sometime over the last 30 years, had been responsive, this single act would have made it much more difficult for the terrorism of 9/11 to have succeeded in turning aircrafts into missiles." said Ralph Nader. "The 9/11 Commission, before its final report, needs to research this situation and come to a judgment about the reasons for failing to protect airline passengers and persons on the ground."

If your local RadioShack don't have the cable, have them order it for you. Make sure you get cable #20-289. The other cable that they try to sell you will NOT work, even though they say it does.

They call this the cosine error in radar work. This is the cosine of

You can't, that's the scam.

But scammer is relying on the fact that the bank will look at your account, see that you have enough in your accounts to cover the bogus MO, and give you the cash. Then when the bank realizes the MO is bad, it's YOUR account that gets debited to cover the shortage...

My understanding was that Tillman got the military award because of his actions trying to rescue others. It wasn't for being in a 'firefight' or just normal combat. He went 'back in' to help with the rescue of others. Which I think was successful.

As to the individual in Sprinfield, I believe one news report had a quote about a 'home neighborhood in Puerto Rico'.

They may not be a corporation. Their web site says nothing about being incorporated.

The company could be a sole proprietorship, partnership, etc.

I recently came into possession of a Uniden Bearcat 800XLT. The radio turned on and worked fabulously the first time it was turned on. Subsequent to that, it will no longer fully power up, only the three indicator lights are activated (Delay, Lockout and Priority). There is no freq. display, it apparently will not scan and the "white noise" volume is very low.

This is a beautiful scanner and, when it did work, appeared to be VERY sensitive on UHF (will be used to monitor local FD freq.'s). I would be extremely appreciative of any assistance or advise that might be available to help me get this thing running properly again.

Thank you,

I have a number of Scanner Crystals. NOS and used. Some of them, I'm not sure what they work in. I got them in on a buy out and they're not familiar to me. ALL scanner crystals are $3.00 each plus shipping. Some are packaged in original packaging. The used crystals, I can test for operation prior to shipping. I have two testers here. What I can not do, is warrant them once installed in your scanner. I only warrant parts that "I" personally install. Also, "I" can't verify "your" Scanners' particular crystal requirements. If you buy up various types of old scanners or own some now and want crystals, this could be a deal for you. All sales are AS IS and final.

2511. Scanner for EMI/RF Detection

I have a business site that is suffering from rather dramatic EMI/RF noise that is causing problems with both the voice and data networks. I see a lot of errors due to noise on the data network, and the handset cords on our user's phones pick up a rather painful intermittent static burst.

I have a handheld EMI detector but it's not a scanner and doesn't tell me what frequency is actually causing the problem. I think I know the source of the problem but I need some help nailing it down.

I'm considering the Opto Digital Scout since it appears to do what I want. My hope is that I could send this to the site and have them let it run for a few hours, and then look through the logs to see what frequencies are being hit. My best guess is that the offending source is in the HF to VHF range, but that's just a guess.

Would the Digital Scout be a good choice for this sort of application? I could hire someone to do an on-site analysis but that would probably cost more than buying the Scout on my own.

Any thoughts?

Many thanks,
John

This is an uninformed statement. The Scammers simply know 2 things:
1) - That most people will simply deposit things like a money order or "cashier's" check into their local bank account.
2) - Most people feel that Money Orders & "cashier's checks" are as good as cash, & don't need the "wait" of a personal check, & will ship the items out asap. It will still take up to 7 business days or more before your local bank finds out the "money Order" or "cashier's check" is no good, & too late then!!

1. I have a Yaesu VR-500 scanner / wide band receiver with box, manual, belt clip, and antenna in as new condition. Covers from below BC band to 1.3 GHz. This radio doesn't seem to be blocked. I haven't found any frequency that it won't program. $200.

2. Icom W-32 A 2 meter/440 HT with 800 MHz receive. Has MAHA drop in charger, good battery, speaker mic, and box. (can't find the manual but it's available on line) This item was previously listed and sold but the buyer didn't follow through. $175.

Will trade either for a dual band mobile or perhaps a high power 2 meter rig such as a VX-8000. May trade both on an all mode 2 meter rig. (Please no 10+ year old rigs that parts aren't available for) All sales are plus shipping from 47130.

The antenna secret is the total amount of capture area. Measure each [+] element then total. Compare the total to each antenna. The antenna with the HIGHEST capture area should out receive any of the others IF the elements are cut for the correct freq. The Omni-2 should be 56" + 9" = 65" This of course is not exact but you can get the picture. Some ant's at: www.bncantenna.com

This article was originally posted in the April, 2004 issue of Scanning USA Magazine. There were a couple pictures, and maybe one of these days I'll put them up on a web site somewhere. -Deep Throat (and the Nixon Plumbers)

Monitoring UFOs
By Deep Throat

I once had a "close encounter" with space aliens. (Or it could have been the FCC. That night was pretty hazy.) I had just come back from a party at a loft in Watertown, Massachusetts that involved interesting electronic devices, attractive ladies who were into geeks, and large amounts of Jose Cuervo. I poured myself out of my ride after a two-hour return trip (always have a designated driver when you go out to pickle your brain), and managed to fall up the two flights of stairs to my apartment where the downy comfort of my bed awaited. Properly situated, I had no sooner fell into that comatose state of bliss then I sensed a presence in the bedroom. Now fully aware and stone cold sober by way of adrenaline, in one smooth motion I hit the touch lamp on the nightstand and drew down on the intruder with the CZ52 I keep handy for unwelcome guests. Taking a look at my target, I notice it is a small ugly gray-looking human with a big head. I first thought it was my landlord, and started to yell at him for not knocking on the door before entering. I then realized that my unexpected visitor was actually from way out of town. It turned out that "he" was a Grey Alien trying to abduct me, but the high levels of Agave in my system somehow thwarted the paralysis device they use. Faced with potential oblivion by way of armed, angry human denied a nice drunken sleep, they offered me Twinkies, Coke, and ride in their spaceship in exchange for a few minutes of my time. I told them that my parents warned me against taking rides from strangers, and that they better at least offer me a few Krugerands in exchange for being a test subject. The space alien replied that they usually keep their gold bullion in Canadian Maple Leafs, and asked if those would be OK instead.

After that things get a little fuzzy and the only things I kind of recall are consenting to a brain tissue sample (considering how many brain cells I've fried, I thought a few more shouldn't matter), their sampling machine repeatedly printing out the words "Hermano del Diablo" before crashing, a heavily-modified Cobra 148GTL CB in the spaceship's cockpit set to Channel 19, and getting hustled off the spaceship after I started taking apart the ship's ion drive with my Leatherman Tool to see how it worked. I woke up the next day, and thought it was all a dream until I saw a stack of gold Canadian Maple Leafs on my nightstand next to the CZ52. That afternoon I sold a few of them to a local pawnshop and bought an Icom R8500 and more Cuervo. Being an electronic plumber by trade, this experience had gotten me interested in what could probably be the ultimate in scanner listening ï¿½ monitoring UFOs, or Unidentified Flying Objects.

From my previous experience, I knew that space aliens make use of the Eleven Meter band on the frequency of 27.185 Mhz. The problem with this frequency however is the difficulty in telling the difference between the terrestrial users and the extra-terrestrial ones. It would seem obvious to me that a race of beings capable of interstellar transportation would rely on more advanced communications than CB. Then again, there may be something special about the 27 Mhz. spectrum that we humans are unaware of. On that note, noted musician and ufologist Mojo Nixon in his critically acclaimed work UFOs, Big Rigs, and BBQ puts forth the theory that some space aliens are actually intergalactic truckers who stop off at Planet Earth because we have the only truck stops in this corner of the galaxy (and serve the best food).

Scannists interested in this subset of monitoring should acquire a few pieces of auxiliary equipment to augment their efforts. The first is a good set of 10x50 binoculars. I have found these to be ideal for getting a better view of things in the sky. They offer a wide enough view and enough magnification to enable you to distinguish between mundane flying objects such as weather balloons, and things that might be a little more interesting. You may also want to get a telescope for those times when additional magnification is needed. The next items are some supplementary reading material. A good aircraft recognition guide such as Janes is essential, as are aviation and astronomy related periodicals such as Aviation Week, Air & Space, and Sky & Telescope. Part of monitoring UFOs is being able to identify the stuff that is terrestrial in origin, and a normal part of the evening sky. Nothing is more embarrassing to discover that your UFO was actually a B2 bomber, the International Space Station, or the planet Uranus. Armed with optics and information on craft indigenous to this planet, you can visually confirm information heard while searching via electromagnetic means. Another potentially useful item is a compass; as in the type that normally points somewhere North. If it starts swinging around all over the place, things will probably start to get interesting real soon. UFOs have been rumored to cause magnetic anomalies, and unusual compass behavior could mean that a UFO is nearby. It may also mean that a local ham just turned on his linear, and started chewing the rag on 3880. Those of you who are still using real computers such as S-100, PDP-11, or TRS-80 systems may also notice your compass "twitches" slightly upon powering your system up. This is most noticeable on with TRS-80 Model 1 systems. One such hobbyist during the mid-1980s was reported to have booted up his Model 1 to play a few games of Lunar Lander only to discover black flying

"triangles" hovering over his residence, and total white-out of TV reception in a mile radius. The hobbyist was later seen near Lakehurst, New Jersey a few years after the incident wearing clothing that screamed out the word "engineer" and sporting implants that would make a Borg jealous.

As far as frequencies are concerned, you should by now realize that frequencies for space aliens are not listed in Police Call. My approach is to listen to select terrestrial frequencies that may provide UFO event indication in my area, usually in the form of one pilot asking another "What the heck was that?!" or common mil-air frequencies that may be used by interceptor aircraft. Frequencies such as 121.5, 243.0, 364.2, 122.2, 122.75, 122.925, and 123.45 MHz. are good bets. I also listen to local aircraft test frequencies in my area, as many alleged UFOs turn out to be experimental aircraft. For example, Sikorsky Aircraft in Connecticut uses 36.90, 38.90, 41.10, 123.15, 123.20, 123.275, 123.325, 123.425, 123.45, 123.525, 123.55, 123.575, 233.80, 275.20, 304.60, 314.60, 324.6, 359.40, 380.4, 382.60, and 384.60 MHz. for flight test operations. Searching 1435-1535, 2200-2300, and 2310-2390 MHz. will also alert you to any aircraft testing in your area. Those frequency ranges are allocated for aircraft test telemetry. Likewise, the local DME/TACAN frequency (960-1215 MHz.) assigned to your neighborhood VORTAC site, or the airborne SIF/SSR transponder frequency on 1090 MHz. is also useful. If your UFO is squwaking, then it's probably of terrestrial origin. The Aircraft transmit on DME/TACAN frequencies from 1025 to 1150 MHz. in 1 MHz. steps.

In the few years of UFO monitoring, I've mostly encountered experimental aircraft, celestial bodies, and the odd satellite. I only managed to snag one unidentified flying object that appeared to be extraterrestrial in origin. It appeared that the craft was having technical difficulties, and landed in a central Connecticut town well known for amount of RF that hobbyists generate there. They probably homed in the weird signals emanating on 147.555 MHz. The craft landed in a parking lot, its occupant got out, and proceeded to a local electronics store to (I assume) acquire repair parts. As our intergalactic visitor left the store, I managed to snap a quick picture of him which I will share with you in this article. For some reason, my digital camera (along with my other electronics) was on the fritz that evening, so the picture quality isn't all that great.

Just make sure you declare you are bringing the radio into Canada and have the bill of sale with you just in case the customs officers ask you where you bought it, you shoud have no problem. Best thing to do is just go to the customs office or call them on the phone and talk to them directly then you get the information from the customs people.

While it may be much quicker now, it used to be that 'out of country' MOs and even cashiers checks could have 'holding periods of as long as 30 days or more.

And, as you said, people just deposit the things. Most people don't realize that when you deposit ANY negotiable to your bank, the term is called "Subject to collection". Which means they will let you deposit it, but if it doesn't clear, you don't get the money. That's what 'holds' are for. Or now with 'online banking'
you see things like 'available cash' or something similar which is the limit the bank will let you grab from an account, even if it says more.

Some people are just too pig-headed to listen when you try to tell them you don't REALLY have the money until the bank GETS the money. The most you get is the 'interest' on the deposited money IF the negotiable check clears.

I thought that might be a better solution since it would provide so much more information. Now the tough part is going to be finding a place to rent one. I was doing some cursory searching yesterday and couldn't find a place near here (Lakewood, CO). I'm sure there are a few places around that have them, though, I just need to find them.

Try electro rent or test equity. I am pretty sure they have a website.
Keep in mind Spec Ani's are not cheap. I have rented them at work and they range from $500 - $1000 per month.

Can you recommend any particular analyzer for this application? I think a lower-end handheld unit is probably the way to go. Since I'm a newbie I don't think I need the more advanced functions that the really big units provide.

I was just doing a quick search and ran across the Anritsu 2711D. That seems to be a pretty nice unit and I doubt it would cost very much to rent for a couple of weeks. The documentation seems to be clear and it seems to be easy to use.

Any suggestions?

Thanks again,
John

Hey all,
I know this radio might be considered outdated (as newer models have more features), but I have a Midland 74-200 for auction that is like new. It would make a great back-up as an RV/Boat radio. It would even be good to use in a basement or workshop. Here is the link if anyone is interested:

The AOR AR3000A can do that with additional software and designated antennas. I read about it some years ago. Maybe the 'expansion kit' is still available. The 3000A's are showing up for sale quite often.
Not very cheap though...

I'm a freelance journalist doing an article on cel phone spy culture and would love to talk to some people who have done this with some frequency. I can quote anonymously and am not looking to do a hatchet job. Just wanting to learn more about it.

Anyone willing to talk can email me @ toplocker@att.net

Thanks

Yes, but if we tell ya anything then we'd be breaking some laws.

Being in journalism, you should know this already.

Any spectrum analyzer should do the job. Just take a look at the sensitivity of the unit to ensure it will pick up small signals. I am partial to the HP (Agilant) (spelling may be wrong here) spec ani's, but you gotta pay out the nose for those.

The Advantest units are cheaper, and also work very well.

I do not think a scanner will do what it is you want and an analyzer is the answer to finding your problem.

If you're in any kind of big city, just solicit 'on the air'.

A number of years ago, analog cell days, a friend called me and started to talk on his cell about something that should have been kept secure.

I told him to stop, and he asked why. I told him there could be eavesdroppers. He said no way, the cell phone company told him people couldn't listen.

So we made a bet.

He gave his office number out 'over the air' in the call, and we asked any listeners to call it and leave a message that they were out there. And we made a bet on it. Sam Adams at the time...

As soon as we did that, he told me he was going to hang up and call his office to make sure the phone messages were clear and he'd call me back.

I waited and waited. Finally he called. His office number was BUSY and he couldn't get through to his voice mail. When he finally did, he had a number of messages, seven if I recall.right, of people listening. One guy even left a message with a signal strength report and he obviously had a beam
as he reported 'direction' as my friend was driving...

2541. Computer programming the PRO 89

Has anyone ever had any luck programming the PRO 89 with radio shack's program and cable? I tried numerous times without success, then called 1800-the shack and asked them if they had complaints from anyone else. They said no. Then, after answering some questions from them, they asked what OS I was running, which is Windows XP. Then they told me it won't work on XP.

I went to my laptop, which runs W98. It'll try, but I have to fiddle with the cable, and get it just right in the jack to program anything into the radio. Then I keep getting errors, partial loads, and not everything is on the channel have it on in the computer.

Any one else have problems with this?

No Problem here, but I do not use the radio shack software or cable. I made my own cable, and downloaded a free programming utility off the internet. I can not remember the name of the program, but search for program, scanner, pro-89 in google and see what shows up.

And Alinco DJ-580's will hear things in that band because the receiver

Any idea how to find someone local to Denver or Colorado Springs who might be able to do this for us? We'd be willing to pay for it, of course, but one person we found who could do it does not have his own equipment so we'd have to pay rental fees on top of his $165/hour fee!

Ouch!!

So, that's why I'm considering renting a unit and learning to do it myself for this particular job. However, if I could find someone to do it for a reasonable fee I'd definitely consider it.

I've been doing Internet searches for people who do EMI/RF site surveys, and I've even looked at people who do countersurveillance, but so far no luck.

Any thoughts?

Thanks,
John

you tried a quality piece of software for whatever radio you have, then

I took the liberty of looking up your AOL profile (gtgrandprix00@aol.com), and it lists you as a person named George in Florida. So I would think you would be interested in the freqs I post for the Military comms that I hear in Florida, since you live here. But if you are not, and if others agree that my postings do not belong here, I will stop them. I had been posting because I had received some messages from rec.radio.scanner folks encouraging me to post my loggings. I'll go along with the consensus of any messages I receive on this.
Again sorry to anyone my postings disturb; it is not my intention.

Contact the ARRL Technical Coordinator in your state. he might be able to direct you to a ham radio operator in your area who has access to the required equipment and would be willing to do it a lot cheaper than $165 an hour.

I'm in NH and I do this type of work on the side. For hams with RF problems, it's free. For everyone else it's a lot less than $165!!!

I love to listen to cell and cordless phones. It is only illegal in the land of the free but not illegal in truly free countries. It is a good close look at the personal lives of other people. I have 2 radios setup that can listen to cell and a few months ago I was having coffee with some members of the local city police and gave them a demo. They just loved the way that drug dealers talk so openly on the cell system.

Check http://www.mods.dk and see what scanners are cell capable. And go buy one from a pawn shop and do the mod.

Do your own listening and get the story first-hand.

Most cell phone systems are digitized now, so there's not as much chatter to listen to as there was several years ago.

Sold my last scanner 4 years ago. No room for 'em here in the 'frigerator box.

So true. ECPA is a joke wrt to technical issues - they legislated away a

Perhaps you should start out your writing career by learning to spell.

Nevermind that cell phones are ALL digital now. There is nothing

And where have you been hiding? :-) It is a well known fact that Icom does not support the PCR1000 anymore and is letting it quietly die, while WinRadio keeps releasing new products all the time. Compare their Web sites and you shall see...

Maybe only with third party software, on which Icom is now relying entirely.

I have both PCR1000 and WR1550e, and the Icom has been collecting dust since I acquired the WinRadio - much better.

Hi all, I have an OLD Realistic pro-2025 16 channel scanner.
I want to give it to a kid down the street but...
It seems to work fine, almost. When I program more than one channel into it
it copies that frequency into all the 16 memories.
Is there a CPU reset to this radio??
When last used a year ago it worked 100 percent.
Any clues?
THANKS for your help

When I was a machinist, I used to make aircraft parts for Marathon Oil Co. jets. That is a real nervous job since you know you cant make any mistakes. I cant even imagine the pressure of working on them. It's just not like a car that you can take on a test drive after you fix it and

My ebay BC250D scanner arrived - MINT CONDITION - I am totally happy with it. I had it delivered to my office, Fridays are quiet there. In the first 2 hours that I had it I FINALLY managed to delete all the stored info .. and tried to start programming. WHAT A LAUGH ! The BC250D manual made this college graduate feel like a complete idiot. I am not new to scanners, I am new to the trunk system, but the trunked system can make anyone feel like a dope.

So I left work and stopped off at my neighborhood Radio Shack to show them my new scanner [I am a pretty regular shopper there] and also BEG for help with my scanner. One worker there is a scanner addict and he programmed my first bank for me. Volusia County, FL [EDACS]

So he programs a few freq and then I take the scanner from him and finish while he waits on a customer. Then I clicked scan and listened for a bit .. Next he programmed something .. He talks in a way that I can't follow much easier than I can the damn manual .. something about ID's. If I understand correctly .. I have all these freqs and those freq carry all the Volusia calls, be it medical - police - or city workers. and the IDs are sort of like sub menus .. so I can scan police calls only or medical only ??? I AM NOT SURE !!

But I figure that now that I am not ENTIRELY CLUELESS like I was at work, I can go home to read [and understand] the manual ... NOPE !! I blame it on the small type, that I am tired .. my eyes are tired .. I will just listen and scan and when I wake up refreshed and drink a few cups of coffee, I will then be able to understand WTF I am reading. NOPE !! Still don't get it and the manual is from hell ..

The manual walks you through the menus and sub menus .. but doesn't tell you what the choices mean .. OH DEAR .. Will I ever get this ?? Is there a BC250D scanner manual for dummies ?? Trunking for Dummies ??? Tried searching the web for a dummy website .. I AM CLUELESS and FRUSTRATED .. Where do I start to understand what the "talk groups" mean ?? How and why to program them, what to name them .. etc etc ..

Years ago, when cell calls could be heard on there were CHEAP cellphone talk time plans ... when people would say, " I will call you when I a pay for phone sex number ... I thought to myself

.. As expensive as this call must be, he could

2597. Popularity of analog vs digital signals for scanning?

I know my radio interests are more in the VHF/UHF arena, and there are many scanning products on the market for analog signals (scanners, Optoelectronics' Xplorer nearfield receiver, etc). But with the new digital methods (APCO) being advertised in scanning equipment, I'm wondering, being in the Boston area, where my investments would now be better placed.

Should I start to leave the traditional analog equipment and concentrate more on digital? Is there enough digital in the Boston / Metro West area - From East of Worcester to the Atlantic, to justify the digital signal search now?

Radios wich different capabilities to think about and I invite feedback on:

- Uniden Bearcat models with trunktracking

- Various wideband receivers, such as from AOR, Icom, Yaesu and others, which mostly seem non APCO and/or non trucktracking

- Opto Xplorer - nice radio, but analog only - would this be an obstacle looking into the near (how you define "near) future?

I am looking at both car and home use, though mostly car, and with limited space, likely a handheld.

Cellular phone technology has also proven analog cellular signals and methods have largely given way to digital.

Insight very much welcome here. I think there is a lot of ground and discussion to be had, and some good education for me and others from those who know, and have, better insight to this.

Thank you.

MCA204 VHF/UHF Receiver Multicoupler
25 MHz to 1 GHz
4 Ports

The MCA204 is a specially designed multicoupler for use in the VHF/UHF service band for radio monitoring and signal surveillance. Its high performance and rugged design will meet the most stringent commercial and government requirements.

MCA204 can support up to four (4) devices such as radios or spectrum analyzers. The four outputs has a gain of +4 dB with a nominal impedance of 50 Ohm. The input circuitry features a 5-section high-pass filter to shape the frequency response of the unit and to provide for out-of-band signal rejection.

The MCA204 is constructed in a rugged die cast aluminum enclosure with mounting flanges. Light gray baked enamel coating is standard.

DC power required is +12 Volts (nominal) at 75 mA.
A wall adapter (110 VAC/+12 VDC-300 mA) is supplied for the North American market.

Asking $125, which includes shipping. First to respond and commit to purchasing gets it!

Just make one. Take a connector and an audio cable. Really easy to build if you have a soldering iron. It will only cost you $5 to make.

Hello,I'm new to the newsgroup here,but I am a scanner listener. I actually have two questions. One,I have a 16 channel Uniden Bearcat 100xl and was wondering what kinda of headphones should I buy for it. The earphone jack is a 2.5 mm.

The next question, I saw on the amtrak website the prohibated items you can't bring on the train, I assume that a scanner would be ok to bring if you don't bring it out in plain view of the train crew and have something to listen to it like an earphone/headphone. Any thoughts or help on my questions?

Were scanners specifically prohibited? How about ham radios?

Its not the drug dealers they are worried about you listening too, its there illegal crap the cops are doing they don't wish you too hear, that's the bad cops, but the other reason is cops use cell phone to talk to each other, because there radio's suck for reception in rural areas, and if they are making a bust, they don't need those drug dealers know that they are coming.

Got the Procomm program - it works great. Better than the Radio Shack version by far! Still using the radio shack cable, and still have to fiddle around to get it in the right spot, but it works.

Thanks for the responses.

Being that we both worked in law enforcement at the time we were able to buy a device that attached to a programmable receiver on the one side, and a computer on the other.

The software allowed you to follow calls by number, by cell site and numerous other options.

You wouldn't believe how easy it was to pick off the criminal behavior. Truly stupid criminals.

I've been into SW listening for a few years and am more or less new to scanning. I have a non trunking scanner. I'm beginning to get the feeling that I'm missing a lot by not listening with a trunked unit.
I really don't understand trunking and the google results I got didn't help much.
Could someone please explain to me trunking transmissions, a trunking receiver and weather it's really worth it to have a trunking receiver to get in on the listening action.
Also, with most things already or about to go digital, is it really worth it to invest in a trunking reveiver? Seems to me that digital will kill the casual listener.
Maybe I'm wrong. That's why I request your input.

TIA for your patience with my questions.

If ya can't solder, then go to the Shack or somewhere that sells a somewhat decent array of items and pick up a Plug Converter. It is a bit more cumbersome to deal with, but sure beats nothing at all!

Scanners are generally prohibited in Motor Vehicles in New York (Amtrak does go there too). Wether this applies to a train is something a lawyer would need to answer.

Not that this will help you if I'm right, but my ADMS software for the vx-5 (version 2.25) states in the help file that it runs under win3.1, 95, 98, and may run under NT. Presuming you're running XP on your newer computer maybe that's the problem?

Hope I"m wrong though, when I upgrade I'm probably gonna switch to XP also.

Good luck
Ben

I am. It doesn't. You won't have a problem with the scanner as long as it isn't audible to other passengers. An adapter to utilize "walkman" style headphones is the perfect solution.

All of the software that he mentioned runs just fine on my 3 XP machines and on my ME machine. He either has a port problem or a UBS adapter problem.

Not being a techie I'm somewhat unfamiliar with the differences

From age alone I'm guessing my Radio Shack Pro-60 to be analog.

Here is one thing that bothers the hell out of me why are these receiver cards built on ISA cards instead of PCI cards? Who the hell has an ISA card slot in their computer? I mean come on PCI-X is almost here across the board. ISA is ancient technology and its what keeps be from getting this type of receiver.

Neither the WR-1550e, or the PCR-1000, are built on ISA cards. Both these models are external devices, that communicate to the computer via an RS232 serial port.

WiNRADiO does offer the internal card version, and as you say, it is on an ISA card. Icom, to my knowledge, never offered an internal one. WiNRAiO does make a shortwave receiver, on a PCI card...finally!

Icom ships the PCR-1000 with Bonito's software now.

I've always preferred the PCR-1000, over the WR-1550e. From a software point, they both could use improvement.

Considering cellular monitoring is a felony in the U.S. Don't be so sure you can protect the identity of your informants. Especially under the new Patriot Act, in the name of homeland security.

The Bonito software is cack IMHO. No support, many bugs and definitely some of the worst available for the PCR-1000. Icom software while berift of features, at least works ;) There are others out there, TakPCR e.g. that are much better. But I do agree there is room for improvement. Mostly it is a fuyn radio to have amd play woth and there are some neat things you can do with it and some of the sound card software out there. PEople get a kick out of seeing the digital pager messages flowing by on the screen for example ;)

2640. bc296d or pro96?

I'm about to venture for a new scanner, and have pretty much narrowed it down to these two models. I happen to live in the Boston, MA area, and I know there is digital activity in my area.

Some of what I've learned about the scanners:

- The 296d has wider receive than the pro96

- The Pro96 reportedly has better receive audio for digital transmissions

- The 296d supposedly does a better job tracking private talking

- The Pro96 can be software updated

- Both have some sort of computer/software control

- Both are direct competitors

- Both are priced pretty close to each other

What selling points make one a better radio than the other?

What else should I know about the 296d vs the Pro96?

I'm in no rush to buy.

Thanks for any insights.

Thanks for the kind words, Dan. Took a few years to accumulate the desktops and handhelds I needed for Mil comms monitoring. Portables offer a significant advantage for Mil comms monitoring.
I live right at the departure end of Patrick AFB's Rnwy 20 and within radio range of acft approaching Homestead, MacDill, NAS Jacksonville, Eglin, Hurlburt, Tyndall, etc, and right between Avon Park Bombing Range and Pinecastle Bombing Range. But even if you are not alongside a Military base you will be surprised at how many military flights are passing overhead your area. A half-decent outside antenna will surprise you if you plug the right freqs into your scanner or search the 225-400 and 138-144 range in AM mode. Also a handheld with a Radio Shack center loaded whip ($14.95) is an amazing combination for snagging Mil comms.
As for freqs, if you join the Milcom group (milcom@mailman.qth.net) you'll find a lot of postings like mine that include listings of the freqs guys are hearing. And there are lots of Mil monitors in the Northeast part of the country. these postings are much more up-to-date than any web-site freq listing you'll find or any book you might buy.
If I can help you any, don't hesitate; I'll be more than willing to guide you any way I can toward enjoying Mil comm monitoring.

Everything could surely use improvement, but comparing the Icom software with WinRadio software is like comparing a bicycle to a Mercedes. There is simply no comparison: The Icom software is crude and primitive, almost childish. It would surely look great on a chunky graphics Commodore computer of the early eighties.
And has Icom finally managed to make it work on Windows XP?

WinRadio software is beautifully crafted and works perfectly on all versions of Windows (and has been working perfectly on Windows 2000 and XP since the day they were introduced). You get plenty of ongoing support, many options (digital signal processing, decoding, trunking, database), dozens of free plug-ins for all sorts of applications (http://xrs.winradio.com), Linux support, Mac support, and even a free "Radio Basic" interpreter (http://www.rbasic.com) . Which other radio manufacturer gives you all that?

Sure, any additional improvement would always be great. But all this is already a thousand times more impressive than whatever crap Icom has managed to provide so far, for their one and only PC-based product.

I've got an Icom PCR1000 running under Windows XP Pro and it works flawlessly! I used the same software under Win95 & 98 with no problems at all. I also have trunking, using TrunkPCR software working flawlessly on the same XP machine. I've tried other software programs and always ended up going back to the icom software. With the DSP module installed and a discone antenna the Icom is hard to beat.

I personally would take a Pro-96 over the Uniden for the battery arrangement alone, not to mention that in general, the 96 has much better quality control than the 296. The fact that the 96 takes AA batts is THE clincher for me. If uniden wants to use a pack, copy one of the big three ham packs, and then rebrand the chargers and stuff as Uniden.
Don't keep using the pitiful ones they use now..

Hello,

I have a PRO-2067 and a 30 watt VHF/UHF transmitter located close together in a small car. Their trunk mounted antennas are also close together. I need a device to disable the PRO-2067 when the transmitter is keyed. The BC-780XLT has an accessory device AutoMute-780 that mutes the speaker when a strong RF signal is detected nearby. However, I'm not sure muting the speaker is enough to protect a scanner from overloading when a transmitter is keyed next to it.

Any suggestions would be appreciated.

Thanks,
Mil.

I have read that it is the first scanner in the world with a tv on it.

However, I believe that even before that, there was some way to hook a scanner up to a tv to monitor the video of scanner frequencies, without a frequency converter.

I'm not sure how that worked. I think it was something about "tapping the IF output" of the scanner, but I'm not sure how that works in regards to video.

I've heard that police video transmissions were in some of the ham bands back then.

That's because ham transmissions in the 400 mhz band and up are only secondary users or below, not primary users. at least, allocation-wise. actual users (transmissions) on the frequencies may vary in certain areas.

such as certain areas might actually have more ham transmissions on those frequencies than any other users, even though hamss are only allocated secondary use or lower on those bands. while other areas might have more transmissions by a different type of user than ham users on those frequencies.

Where I currrently live, ham transmissions of any kind seem to be completely absent in the 900 MHZ band and above.

while I have heard that they are very active on those frequencies in other areas.

probably the best placr to find those types of callers are at the movie theatres, but only while the movie is playing. ;)

Before andd after the movie, they're quiet.

Once the movie starts, "Oh, I'm watching this movie ahgain right now. It's the 5'th time I've seen it becaues it's so good. It ends up by the main character doing this...." and the whole plot is ruined for the rest of the people in the theatre becaues of the spoiler announced as loud as can be on a cell phone. ;)

to see what's there.

I started out as a AM broadcast band/FM broadcast band/Shortwave Broadcast bands listener and dx'er.

Somehow that evolved into scanning as I found out that there were even more radio frequencies being used for radio transmissions than just AM, FM, and Shortwave.

That's why I like my IC-R3 even despite a lot of it's shortcomings.

It covers a very wide frequency range.

It would probably be to expensivve for me to actually get a good radio for each of the specific frequency bands that it covers.

On it, I can listen to AM broadcasts, FM broadcasts, Shortwave broadcasts, the regular scanner bands, VHF lo, VHF air, VHF hi, UHF, and UHF-T) or watch VHF and UHF tv broadcasts on it.

Well, I guess I won't be able to do that last one with it once all tv transmissions are digital in another few years or so.

What pisses me off, is in council meetings where one individual "always" gets a Nextel call. You would think he would turn it off for the short time we meet OR tell them not to call, he won't be available or plain turn the

If you prefer BC-listening on shortwave this thing is real nice for its multi-tone automatic notch and a steal for its price compared to DSP based filters having this feature.
The noice cancelling function was not very impressive IMHO.

Sadly it lacks of peak, doublepeak and passband filtering for digital modes.

Take your choice.

PS: no need for x-post, f'up set.

My local Radio shack is an authorized dealer. they carry radio shack stuff and can carry other stuff not related to radio shack if they want. I don't understand why when our community went to trunked system that they didn't market the most current radio's on the market to follow these systems. I had to special order my Pro 95.They don't have one on the shelves.They have the Pro 94 and a race scanner.. They say there isn't any money is scanners. I argue well if you're looking to make a buck it would be in your best interst to market the small stuff to get people in the door then make the big bucks.. We have a big event coming up here . A few people have bought scanners from them. All of them are buying the pro 94. They say the 95 cost too much.Isn't the price difference less than 50.00? Steve Mine also works fine with XP. I run into an issue every now and then where the radio forgets its template. You may try creating a new template file for the software if the other suggestions here do not produce results ( ie....wrong port). Good luck!

Simple. Use a diode to rectify the RF - feed the diode to the base of a PNP transistor. Then use the open collector output to provide V+ to a small relay, which will kill power on the scanner. A small piece of wire on the diode will be all you'll need if you have sufficient RF. Current limit the base connection - a 10K should do it. Botta boom, botta bing.

You can get fancier and use a time constant for hysteresis on the relay - lag time so it's not tempted to chatter. But if the RF is strong that shouldn't be a problem.

You need a TR (transmit/receive) switch. It will open/close a circuit when it senses RF. It's a pretty simple circuit using a relay and a few diodes and etc. I've built them before but don't have a schematic that I can lay my hands on right quick. You might check the Radio Amateurs Handbook at the local library for schematics. RM~

Howdy Panzer, the UT-106 is worth every cent. I was reluctant and waited before buying one. But now I'm really glad I did. I wouldn't live w/o it now. It makes listening a real pleasure and much less of chore. It makes your noise level completely adjustable and really does work. Before I bought one, I looked into other dsp software options etc, & noticed that all the bad I had heard was from someone trying to sell me something else. You won't regret buying the UT-106. IMHO

I live in a large apartment building in Spearfish, South Dakota. Last Friday, apparently my neighbor called the police to report that she could hear her phone ring in my apartment. So, two Spearfish city police officers showed up at my door, explained what was happening, and asked to "inspect my phone." Sometimes other residents' phones interfere with my wired phone line, and sometimes this interference causes my phone to ring for no apparent reason, so I figured that this was probably related and agreed to let them take a look at my phone.

Sometimes I get interference from cordless phones on UHF business frequencies on my BC 895XLT. That scanner was on at the time in the same room and certainly caught their attention, so I mentioned to them that sometimes interference from cordless phones comes across my BC 895XLT (so that I wouldn't look like a criminal if that was the problem.)

When they made a test call from a cellphone to the neighbor's cordless phone, sure enough, the audio came across a frequency programmed into the BC 895XLT (451.775 MHz.) I made sure the officers saw the frequency on the display and explained to them that this frequency is licensed to a local electrical company (Besler Inc., WNAE961.) To prove this, I accessed the FCC's online database (http://gullfoss2.fcc.gov/cgi-bin/ws.exe/genmen/index.hts), retrieved the license record, and showed it to them.

One of the officers said he "didn't buy the story", so I was handcuffed, hauled in, and spent the night in the county jail. Now I am being charged with Unlawful Interception of Telephone Communications, a Class 5 felony.

P.S. They got a search warrant and came back later and seized every piece of radio equipment I own as evidence, including all my scanners, CB radios, ham radio transmitters, Family Radio Service walkie-talkies, shortwave broadcast receivers, etc.

I only know what happened to me. Going on aa trip to Canada, after examing the two radios I had with me, after asking me about them and me telling them (the border patrol) about them, they let me take the scanner across, but wouldn't let me take my shortwave radio across and told me radios that tune between 1620 khz and 30 mhz are illegal in Canada, and that shortwave radios are ilegal in Canada, and then they confiscated my shortwave radio.

They also told me that I would get it back when I came back across the border back into the U.S. However, I never got it back when I came back across and wasn't able to because it had been confiscated as "illegal goods".

Assuming this story is true, why would you let them into your apartment to "inspect your phone"? How would your neighbor know her phone was ringing in your apartment? And why would you be stupid enough to leave your scanner on when it must have told you that the cops were next door?

BTW, if the story is true, you're screwed. The law is pretty clear:

"23A-35A-20. Unlawful interception or recording a felony -- Telephone or telegraph -- Conversations -- Jury deliberations. Except as provided in 23A-35A-21, a person is guilty of a Class 5 felony who being:

(1) Not a sender or receiver of a telephone or telegraph communication, knowingly and by means of an instrument or device overhears or records a telephone or telegraph communication, or aids, authorizes, employs, procures, or permits another to so do, without the consent of either a sender or receiver thereof;"

Even if the reception was an image signal, you can't listen to it in South Dakota. But, if you were so dumb as to allow the cops to stroll into your apartment with your scanner blaring to inspect your phone, you probably deserve what you'll get.

You can't INTENTIONALLY listen to a cordless phone call anywhere in the US, regardless if it's an image. So a ham excercising his right to tune the 900 MHz band and accidently hears one of the cordless phones sharing that band, he's a felon? Yeah right..... there is no mens rea (a legal word for criminal intent)

My advice, assuming all the above is true, is to find a decent lawyer.
Someone who is willing to learn or already understands details about radio frequencies and scanners.

I hope for your sake none of your receivers are capable of receiving cellular transmissions. If so, I hope you are not afraid of 12ft square cells.

I would believe that if you are receiving her phones calls through your scanner, even if it is just an image, that you should have ceased using the scanner otherwise you are committing a felony. Although I don't live in the US, I would assume that a similar law applies to you.

It wasn't off topic to the group, but is was off-topic to the question. That is probably why some people had a go at you.

The question asked about the workings of trunked radio systems and you started talking about RadioShack.

I didn't mind. It made for interesting reading :)

My friend lives just down the road from Spearfish, and guess what he works for Spearfish Police, and he tells me this guy is so full of shit that they just ignore him anymore, he is one of those guys that calls Wolf Wolf, here and there, but there never is any problem. Don't listen to this guy anymore, he is a mental retard, a crazy person.

I'm not the original poster, but my scanner doesn't recieve police calls, but recieves cordless phones in some of the ham bands and what I assume to be cellular images in other bands, even though it doesn't cover cellular.

I'm not interested in hearing cellular or cordless phones. When I bought my scanner, I thought that I could hear the police on it because the ads for it said "covers 0.495 mhz to 2450 mhz, cellular bands blocked".

The ads never said that the public safety bands on it were also blocked. which they are.

I was however, interested in hearing ham radio.

Get your information right dumbass

Gore never said he invented the internet... another psycho right twist.
He said he influenced it rollout.
3 purple hearts, silver and bronze medal.... you have no business even bringing it up. The coward Bush cried to Daddy to jump ahead of a 140 other people to get out of real combat. A fucking coward that has no problem sending others to their death. I wish Bush's homely daughters would get sent to Iraq.

It was on a webtv newsgroup. webtv also has what is known as "club newsgroups". These are moderated newsgroups in which the moderator can ban you from the newsgroup by using the code from your webtv box, so that you're not able to post there even if you try to.

no it isn't impossible. It was an alt.discuss webtv newsgroup, firewalled within webtv, separated from the usenet newsgroups, although webtv (msntv) claims that the alt.discuss newsgroups are not part of webtv and claims that they are part of usenet.

true. However, on webtv, it works by banning the boxes by using the code on your box.

Once the owner of a cerain club group sends the code, your webtv box is no longer able to post to that particular newsgroup.

It gets banned by box, so even if there's other users on your box who did not do anything wrong or did not make off-topic posts, they can't post in that particular newsgroup, either.

yes he did. And I believe that I even have it recorded on VHS videotape fromyearsa ago.

He definitely said that he invented the internet.

As far as I can remember, the exact words spoken by Gore that I have recorded on VHS tape from tv is "I invented the internet".

How is him saying "I invented the internet" him not saying "I invented the internet"???

Oh neveer mind, I know. You'll just pull a Clinton like when he said "it depends on what the definition of is is."

Okay, that might not be an exact quote of what Clinton said, but close enough. And the other one is definitely an exact quote of what Gore said, as I have it (or had it) on VHS somewhere.

Agreed. Anyone dumb enough to let the police into their home without a warrant deserves whatever he gets.

Too bad the story is complete fiction.

But, there is a lesson to be learned here nonetheless.

Would someone please post, or provide a link, to explain to a layman the difference between the two? Websites found via Google don't relate well to radio scanners.

Communication received from officials in Canada states analog scanners are permitted however digital scanners may be subject to licensing. Obviously I'd to know how to confirm which is which?

Events in Iraq Test President as Leader
By Janet Hook
Times Staff Writer

May 7, 2004

WASHINGTON - The cascade of troubling developments in Iraq has posed an extraordinary test of President Bush's leadership, forcing him to do several things that do not come easily to him.

Although the hallmarks of his administration have been loyalty, discipline and doggedness, Bush in recent days has openly criticized a top lieutenant, changed course on troop levels and funding in Iraq and been subjected to a new spate of dissent from fellow Republicans in Congress.

Bush's rebuke of Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld for his handling of the Iraq prison scandal, delivered in private but deliberately made public by top White House aides, is a rare departure for a president who has labored to keep divisions within his administration behind closed doors.

Bush's decision this week to seek more money for Iraq, considered overdue by some members of Congress, is seen by lawmakers as an admission that costs are growing more rapidly than had been expected.

And the controversy over the administration's handling of the abuse of Iraqi prisoners, including the Pentagon's apparent delay in notifying Congress, has so infuriated lawmakers that more Republicans are second-guessing an administration that is seen as having little appetite for public dissent from its usual allies.

Bush's leadership style - both in domestic and foreign policy - has produced a remarkably disciplined and focused White House for most of his tenure in office.

But now, some critics argue that his administration's tightly held process of setting and sticking by policy - described by administration insiders in several recent books - has contributed to some of the problems it faces after the end of major combat in Iraq. Critics say administration planners gave short shrift to signs that stabilizing Iraq would require more time, money and manpower than they expected.

"It is not a deliberative or particularly rational process, and it's seldom open to new information," said Thomas Mann, a political analyst at the Brookings Institution. "That was responsible for the lack of planning for what was to follow the war."

"There is a general sense out there that the administration does not tolerate any points of view that are contrary to theirs," said Sen. Chuck Hagel (R-Neb.), who has argued that the U.S. should seek more international support for the Iraq mission. "Good, sharp critical thinking is absolutely imperative to good policy."

A senior administration official disputed the contention that the White House was rigid and closed to dissenting views or new information, citing the many course corrections the administration has made since the end of major combat in Iraq.

"I think actions speak louder than words. How the administration has pursued Iraq's reconstruction and the transfer of sovereignty is by having a plan but having a flexible plan that does adapt to changing conditions on the ground," the official said.

Recent weeks have posed a steady stream of challenges to Bush that have tested his ability to keep his Iraq policy on course.

The release of photographs of Iraqi prisoners being abused created a firestorm that he and his top lieutenants were ill-prepared to douse.

It came on the heels of weeks of continuing instability and outbursts of anti-Americanism in parts of Iraq. The U.S. military has struggled for a strategy to handle Fallouja, a hotbed of the insurgency. In April, 136 American troops died in Iraq - the deadliest month yet in the conflict.

Recent polls have suggested that these troubles are affecting the public's assessment of Bush's handling of the conflict in Iraq. A new Gallup survey - conducted as reports of Iraqi prisoner abuse were emerging - found that 42% of those surveyed approved of the way Bush is handling the situation in Iraq, down from 48% in April and 61% in January.

No one knows for sure how this will affect Bush's reelection prospects. But the events that seem to be swirling beyond his control undercut one of Bush's strongest political assets: his persona as a strong leader.

"It would be better for him if it appeared more that he was ahead of events rather than reacting," said Charles O. Jones, a professor emeritus at the University of Wisconsin. "His great strength has been a positive image of his capacity to lead . of seeming to be in charge, not letting others determine what he's going to do."

One important aspect of Bush's leadership style is his tendency to remain detached from the nitty-gritty details of issues. Some analysts say that may have contributed to the fact that Bush, who had been told in January in general terms about an investigation of prisoner abuse, felt blindsided when he recently learned its full extent.

"He is not known for his curiosity, for pressing for new information," Mann said. "His antennae were not well positioned to pick it up."

Another important feature of Bush's leadership has been the priority he puts on loyalty, discipline and presenting a united administration front. That has made his White House unusually free of leaks and unauthorized disclosure of internal divisions.

That is why it was so unusual that top administration aides made a point of letting reporters know Wednesday night that Bush had told Rumsfeld that he was unhappy with the defense secretary's handling of the prison scandal. But the scolding only went so far: The next day, Bush reaffirmed his support for Rumsfeld.

"He's an important part of my Cabinet, and he'll stay in my Cabinet," Bush said Thursday.

Another hallmark of Bush's presidency has been his tendency to consult Congress less often than many of its members, including those in his own party, would like.

"It's been like pulling teeth getting information out of this Defense Department," said Rep. Jim Kolbe (R-Ariz.), chairman of the House subcommittee that handles Iraq reconstruction funding.

Although such complaints are common under all presidents, the Bush White House has been especially determined to expand presidential powers and limit the reach of the legislative branch. Against that backdrop, lawmakers, especially in the Senate, were infuriated that the Pentagon had apparently delayed informing Congress about the prisoner abuse scandal.

Rep. Christopher Shays (R-Conn.) said the scandal might have been averted if the Pentagon was not so resistant to congressional oversight.

"Many of us have asked to go to places, and one of the places we should have been visiting were the prisons to see how difficult it was for our troops to handle these prisoners," Shays said.

Hagel argues that Bush will have to be more open to input from congressional dissidents if the president wants to shore up his political support during the potentially rocky months ahead, as Iraq makes its transition to sovereignty.

"It's more likely Congress will hang with you" if its members do not feel cut out of discussions, Hagel said. "These problems are going to get wider and deeper."

The White House denied that there was any effort to keep Congress in the dark.

"The president has made it clear he wants Congress to be kept informed," said an administration official who asked not to be named. "But I do think that for as long as I've lived in this town, Congress is rarely satisfied with its level of notification on any subject."

In these days and times, NEVER let the police in your residence w/out a warrant. Hypothetically, if this story were true, I think the scanners confiscated would have to have the specific phone frequencies entered into a memory location in order for charges to be filed.

Police do NOT like to be monitored, and some of them take offense at even the sight of scanners in possession by citizens. Years ago I heard my local police chasing a suspected criminal in my apt complex and I heard they were in MY courtyard. I stepped out onto the balcony and saw a man hiding on a neighbors patio and called the police and gave them the information. Without thinking I told the dispatcher I was hearing the chase on my scanner. The guy got away from them and they were pissed, knocked on my door and came into MY apt looking for the guy!!!! They were very pissy and after walking through my place and invading my privacy, told me to 'mind my own business from now on, they didn't need my help' - I have since had several times when I could have helped out and I have looked the other way. Never again.

Tuesday morning I decided to take a couple days and spend at the Key West, FL. Of course I had to bring some scanners, 2 BC785's, BC780, BC250, plus my 144/440 dualbander to chat with some ham friends along the wayï¿½..

Before getting to the Keys I had thought activity should be good but I just didn't realize how good! Below are my logs, since I was driving or at least in my pickup it wasn't always easy to write down much detail about each transmission. But there are enough freqs and callsigns to give you an idea of what you would hear if you came to the Keys. By all means, if you're traveling to the Keys and want to give MilAir scanning a try PLEASE program in the freqs found in the logs below, it will be non stop activity! I'm sure if I wrote down all that I heard this log would be at least 5 times longer!

Not only is MilAir scanning great from down here but so is the aviation activity you'll see if you just look up! All day long many F/A-18's (call sign AMBUSH) arriving and departing from NAS Key West, from my motel room I had an excellent view. This afternoon got to see a CH-53 drop 5 parajumpers into the Gulf. And it was interesting to see the massive VHF/UHF antenna arrays located at Truman Annex of NAS Key West which is a small area located on the far west side of KeyWest. Looks like 100 TV Yagi ants pointed towards Cuba (only 90 miles away), I bet it isn't the Key West Cable Company and I'm sure they're not receiving CNN!

A bit OT, but....A few years ago I was talking with a Washington State Trooper. Subject of scanners came up (during a discussion on using cellular phones in cars. A No No in this county). Told him I monitored the CHP in my state and both the Oregon and Washington Highway Patrols when traveling in the North West.

His reaction was "So you like to hear us get shot, huh?" Told him "No, but it keeps me apprised of things happening so I can avoid situations". Which is the truth. (Plus it does help avoid speeding tickets, sometimes.)

He said it didn't matter anyway, because the WSP transmissions are delayed by 5-15 minutes because of us scanner nuts. What went through my mind was "Sure! Right! Yeah! 5-15 minutes! In that time a lot can happen. Right after he left, I pulled out my hand scanner and heard him fire up his rig and report back on duty after dinner break. Hmm.....maybe it's only 5-15 minutes for a major crime and real time for minor things......Just had to laugh.......Eric

If this story is true, then you got the officers names and talked to their Umm...you'd better read the law again. It makes no mention of it being intentional. All you have to is overhear the conversation. I hope your lawyer is better at understanding the law than you are. It's a dumb law but lots of people end up in the pokey because of dumb laws.

What brand of radio is this, exactly? I've never heard of any broad band radio that had the "public safety" bands blocked. And what bands are we talking about here. Let's see, there's 30 to 50 mHz, 150 to 174 mHz, 450 to 520 mHz, and 800 to 950 Mhz. This is not counting the new 700 mHz "public safety" band. Is there anything you can hear EXCEPT hams? Assuming you live in the US and not someplace like Russia, your story makes no sense, especially for a "mediaguy"

Let's see. He was posting to a Batman (!) group on WebTV and is now posting

Well,, if this is legit,, let this be a lesson to you to NEVER let any LEO in your residence without a warrant or a court order. Once you give them permission to enter they will look for "anything" that they could possibly hang you with. Ive slammed the door on cops before and they stood outside and huffed and puffed, I just told them to show me a warrant or arrest me or get the hell off my property.
They left, and didnt come back.

Oh please.. I don't believe this story.

But, if it's true.. you're first mistake was listening to your neighbor's phone calls. Bad.

Next mistake was consenting to a police search of your home. You're not alone, lots of people make this mistake.

The biggest mistake was leaving your scanner on while they were there... jesus, you were begging to get caught at that point. Image or not, if the police are there to investigate whether you listening to your neighbor's phone calls... and they hear her phone come through one of your scanners... you're busted. Duh.

I'm sure people will argue that you were listening to an image and not the actual transmission. This doesn't matter... the cops heard her phone. What the hell were you thinking?

I choose not to be so lame. I work with a police department and if your story is true (which I doubt), I can assure you a call or e-mail to the Chief would have been well worth the effort, unless that person is a total crook. That is when the letter to the editor comes in.

I find it interesting that you wouldn't waste your time trying to correct being arrested and spending the night in the hole, yet you have enough of your valuable time to read through internet newsgroups.

Where I work a lot of the calls are dispacted via wireless compter. There are laptops in all of the cars, connected via digital cellular to dispatch.
You'll never know listening to a scanner.

maybe he was listening to the 900 mhz ham band for ham transmissions and her cordless phone just happened to be one of the 900 mhz ones, thereby stopping his scanner on the freqency when she got a phhone call.

Well, at least you have the mentality of a some cops, being that you interpret things the way you want to hear them (if, in fact you really are a cop, which I doubt) and you only hear what you want to hear and you think you're right. Not only typical, but infinitely lame to boot. 'Correct being arrested'? Where did you dream that? Reread the post, occifer. They looked thru my place. They were being obnoxious. I didn't break any laws. I'm a licensed amateur radio operator and I have the right to own whatever radios I want to. I was never in fear of being arrested or spending the night 'in the hole', as you so eloquently state. I don't break laws, therefore I don't worry about such things. Like most trolls, you flame someone for reading newsgroups. Now that's not only lame, it's fucking hilarious.

Another one for Ignormax - man I love this program. I never have to waste time reading you again:)

Assume the position. Your IP just got shitcanned.

I just noticed the frequency that he said he heard his neighbor's cordless phone on.

It's in the regular UHF business band, not frequencies that cordless phones operate on.

However, his story might be true. I also get interference from cordless phones in parts of the UHF band. I get interference from cordless phones in the UHF tv part of the spectrum. although they are very very weak, so I'm guessing that they're images on mine.

here's some of the quotes from his post:

He claimed to be listening to regular UHF business frequencies, not cordless frequencies.

reread his original post. He was listening somewhere around 450 mhz. yet other posters then asked him why he was listening to his neighbors' cordless phones, despite him saying (in the original post) that he was listening to 450 or 451 mhz and that he just happens to get interference from cordless phones on his scanner on the UHF business band frequencies.

True, but if it's like where I work, they'll still call you on their Doesn't matter under South Dakota law. Intercepting a phone call is against the law, whether you're tuned directly to the frequency or it's an image.

And turning it down is the same idea as what most people do when they see a police car on the interstate - they drive at 62 even though they know the speed limit is 65. No point in setting them off if you don't have to and having your scanner on while you're being visited by the police is the same concept.

Is there any mod or upgrade etc that will let you scan and encrypted talkgroup on the PRO96. The manual says that it isn't possible. I live in an area where a service has changed to a fully encrypted APCO25 digital trunked service but some comms are still transmitted in unencrypted digital. My scanner won't pick up the talkgroup to hear the clear comms though - is there any way of doing this or even another scanner on the market that will let me?

There's all kinds of callsigns for the "new" (mostly UHF-T, mostly digital) LAPD dispatch frequencies. KMA367 was THE callsign fom 1948 into the late 1950s, and is still in existence for a handful of mostly-seldom-used freqs.

"KMA" is merely a shorthand for KMA367 that developed over the years when officers (not dispatchers) would indicate that they were finishedd with a relatively lengthy message.

It's still used out of habit, even though the KMA367 callsign hasn't been used for patrol frequencies in almost 22 years.

From the SoCalScan group...

Effective this Sunday, May 16, LAPD will discontinue use of the 22-year old and often misunderstood "Code Two High" dispatching procedure.

Heretofore there have been four categories of call DISPATCHING priority:

* CODE 3: Emergency Calls - Priority Level 1 / Code 3 response (siren/red lights)

* CODE 2 HIGH: Urgent & Potentially Life-threatening - Priority Level 1 / Code 2 response (respond immediately, obey rules of the road)

* CODE 2: Urgent, but not necessarily life-threatening - Priority 2 / Code 2 response

* (NON-CODED): Not urgent or emergency, respond as soon as practicable = Priority Level 3 / No Code

With the elimination of Code 2 High, all calls received that may represent a life-threatening situation SHALL be dispatched as Code 3, and the operator taking the call will immediately initate a single-stage dispatch broadcast including (a) Alert Tone, (b) Division of Occurrence, (c) type of call, (d) location, (e) if possible, a brief description of suspect, vehicle and weapon, (f) incident number, (g) reporting district ("RD") of call.

The operator (usually the "EBO"/call-taker) will immediately queue the call to the RTO for the division of occurrence, and return to the caller to obtain (and then broadcast) any supplemental information.

Officers dispatched to a Code 3 call shall advise the operator of their starting location, and the RTO will broadcast that, for example, "2A21 is responding Code 3 from Wilshire and Alvarado to 6th Street & Shatto Place."

Code 2 calls (urgent but not life-threatening) will be queued to and dispatched by the RTO for the division of occurrence.

As has always been the policy at LAPD, an officer can decide, based on additional information he/she may have, to upgrade to Code 3 any Code 2 or non-coded call. The officer shall notify the RTO, who will broadcast that Code 3 response information.

Bottom line, expect more Code 3 calls, possibly A LOT more.

Code-2 calls will generally be broadcast only on the division of occurrence.

Nah mate, it's not possible. Encrypted comms are exactly that. Encrypted. IIRC every radio on the network is given an encryption key (seperate to the radio ID), and this key then only allows the specific radios to decode the comms. No scanner at all is capable of this. And also IIRC, you would be breaking the law being able to eavesdrop an encrypted conversation anyway. Technically, encrypted comms are supposedly uncrackable, but I recall reading an article about a couple of blokes who managed to crack it. I think it was something like 24 hours of number crunching with a computer in order to crack the encryption key. Not exactly real time... I'm sure one of the experts could explain it better though.

If you haven't seen the video then NO you can't imagine it. Its not only the video itself which is moving but the audio. I think the audio was more moving then the video, listening to a man's screams as his head is being hacked off. And I do mean "hacked" off as the knife being used was not large or sharp enough to do a clean job.

Until you see and HEAR the movie for yourself then my answer is NO, no way can you imagine it...

I don't think he wants to listen to encrypted conversations. If you reread his original message, he said that the encrypted communications are also preventing the unencrypted communications from being heard on his scanner.

Icom IC-R3 and the ads NEVER said that the public safety bands were blocked on it (although they are). The ads only said that cellular was blocked. giving the false impression that only cellular was blocked on it.

yes. Noaa weather, businesses in the UHF band (450-470 mhz), aircraft in the 108 to 136 mhz band.

yes, I live in the U.S., and even though my story here doesn't make any sense, they are the facts.

the 800 mhz public safety band is blocked by the manufacturer on my scanner.

Not that it matters much anymore, since the police departments here have went digital anyways.

good point. However, then that also makes it illegal to listen to the ham bands even if you're a ham.

Not only do I only get codless phone calls (which are not images) in the 900 mhz ham band and no hams in it, I also get hams purposely broadcasting phone calls in the 2 meter (144 to 148 mhz) ham band (phone patches).

I can even hear the phones ringing when the hams make phone patch calls through the ham repeaters.

and the person on the other end who is not a ham is of course on a telephone. therefore, you are listening to phone calls if you listen to a ham make a phone patch on the ham repeater.

I'm not saying I believe much or all of the following, but I thought I'd post it here anyway because I've been hearing similar things from a number of different sources (a quick Google search would turn up many of them). The one thing that makes me think there's something to this is that I have seen a video of a real beheading done in much the same fashion as this, and it was far more graphic and even more disturbing than this video. It's not too much of a leap for me to admit the possibility that this video was faked.

15 Anomalies Surrounding Death Of Nick Berg
What Really Happened.com Letters
5-14-4

(Warning: Parts of the following discussion contain rather sickening references.)

Arab linguists have said the man posing as the Jordanian Zaraqawi did not speak with a Jordanian dialect. Others have suggested the man reading the written statement may not have been a native speaker of Arabic.

Zaraqawi was missing one leg and had been outfitted with an artificial leg that did not fit or function properly. He was unable to walk or stand normally with his ill-fitting limb. No man in the group showed evidence of such an infirmity.

Numerous indigenous sources have said Zaraqawi was killed by a US helicopter attack months ago when he was unable to move quickly enough to escape the targeted house. While others managed to exit the house in time to survive, he died in the collapsed building.

As any surgeon will testify, the alleged beheading was a fake. A beheading would result in a tremendous amount of spurting blood. There would have been blood everywhere had an actual beheading taken place. When the executioner holds up Berg's head immediately following what is represented as an actual decapitation of a living person, there is no significant blood flow from the neck or blood splatters showing anywhere on the executioner. Furthermore, the cut was simply too neat to have been done crudely and with such amazing speed by a man wielding a knife. Anybody who has ever carved a turkey knows there is something wrong with the supposed beheading. The suspended head looks more like Berg had been neatly beheaded by a guillotine.

The orange jumpsuit was standard US military issue to men in custody. It is unlikely Berg would have continuing wearing a US custodial uniform if he had been released by the military as they claim. The fact he was still wearing the suit is both anomalous and suggestive. One is forced to speculate as to whether there was an immediate transfer of Berg from the US military to unknown persons, thusly preventing Berg from discarding his US prison garb.

Several of the men in the film were fat by Iraqi standards. If they were Feyadeen or mujahadeen, they probably have been living underground since the first days of the occupation. Tens of thousands of Iraqis have been shown on news stories as they have marched and demonstrated. One would be hard pressed to point out a single fat man among these thousands.

Some men had what can only be described as pasty-white hands. Once again, one would be hard pressed to find Arab men with pasty-white hands.

The lack of spurting blood suggests Berg was already dead at the time of the alleged decapitation. It is possible Berg's dead body was displayed with his head already partially or totally severed. In any case, he almost certainly was killed before the staged beheading. If so, it suggests the captors had no stomach for an actual beheading of a living person, and they opted to fulfill their assignment quietly and with the least amount of gore.

The scream that is heard has been interpreted as a woman's scream by many viewers. Videotape cognoscenti have further said the scream was amateurishly added to the tape.

The U.S. government translation of one statement made on the film is: "Does al Qaeda need any further excuses?" This is a falsification. The actual statement urged fellow insurgents to get off their hind ends and do something. One assumes the translator being used by the US military is a native speaker of Arabic, so this cannot be explained as an innocent flub. This suggests the US government wanted to inject an alleged al- Qaeda group into the murder of Nick Berg.

Iraqis who have seen the videotape on Arabic news broadcasts are universally saying the men in the film are not Iraqis. Are they saying this partly because the speaker does not employ an Iraqi dialect? Where does their certainty come from?

Firearms experts have stated the AK-47 carried by one man was a "Gilal." This actually is an Israeli-made weapon that improves on the famous AK-47. Feyadeen and other insurgents almost universally use AK-47s.

The man in the videotape who is purported to be Zarqawi is wearing a gold ring. This is absolutely proscribed by Islamic law.

The US military has stated that Berg was never in US custody and that he had been in custody of the Iraqi police. The Iraqi police adamantly deny he was ever in their custody. On April 1, an e-mail from Beth A. Payne, the U.S. consular officer in Iraq, was sent to the family of Nick Berg. It stated that Ms. Payne had located Nick, and he was currently in custody of the US military. We have to conclude that either the email was bogus or the US military has been lying.

The chair that Berg was seated in during the filming was a standard issue military chair of the exact same kind as seen in a color photo taken at the Abu Ghraib Prison. The chances a terrorist cell would be using this same chair are minimal at best.

To each their own.
The points you make are legitimate I think.
Personally,I have seen people die violent deaths in real life,so I likely could imagine it.
Also,I remember viewing some little clip of a Russian soldier in Chechyna getting his throat sliced - And I kind of had the feeling I was violating that persons last moments on earth.
People who video tape these acts obviously want them to be seen - For shock value and as a warning. You are,in ways,doing just what these barbarians want by viewing their infamous deeds.
I don't need much further motivation to increase my hatred for radical islamists.

I bought a used PRO-2045 scanner and the LCD backlights don't illuminate but the scanner works ok otherwise.

I opened the case but it looks like they are buried in there -- maybe more than I want

I have another PRO-2045 and it seems to have a light on both ends of the LCD screen.

Since neither work, I assume the problem is common to both.

Any ideas on how to approach this problem?

Yes, that is the video I saw, so I should retract the comment where I said I saw a beheading because that doesn't quite count. It's still horribly gruesome, though. Absolutely horrifying. It honestly made me physically sick.

There are only a couple of things that I've seen in my life that I wish I could erase, or that I really wish I hadn't seen, and that video was one of them.

I don't know where to start... :-)

The software strikes you first: It looks and feels really professionally crafted. Heaps of features, fantastic spectrum analyzer, etc.

I have just downloaded a few of what they call "XRS plugins" from http://xrs.winradio.com . Heaps of useful functions - for free.

The performance is excellent. The receiver is very sensitive, and a fast scanner. The mechanical design is robust and elegant. Clear concise user's manual, and the beautiful packaging is an absolute overkill. So far, I got more than I expected. I'd give it 5 stars.

BTW I got myself the optional Advanced Digital Suite too, it has many different analyzers and decoders, and I got a very good package deal on it... ;-) It will take me some time to get through all the functions, so far I tried the Advanced Signal Conditioner which has heaps of graphically adjustable filters. IMHO this feature alone is well worth the money, but there are many more...

Hope this helps.

George

PS Cold and rainy at Dayton today. Not much joy in the outdoors flee

I think you misunderstood the point of my comment, and that's my fault for not making it more clear. In fact, I didn't really do much to make it clear so, again, I blame myself.

My intent was not to anger anyone, and for that I apologize. Here are the three points that I did a horrible job of making:

1. This sort of video is designed to have a specific effect on those who see it
2. Things are not always as they seem
3. There is reason to doubt the official version of this story

I know that the first two points are obvious and go without saying, but there are valid reasons to wait before coming to a judgment on this. The only version of this story that says this was al-Qaeda is the US version. Many other experts firmly believe this was not done by the Iraqis, al-Qaeda, or Al-Zarqawi.

In fact, the US said that Al-Zarqawi was himself killed in attack some time ago. It's interesting that they say that he's the guy in the video.

There are a number of other reasons to at least make you suspect that the official story doesn't match with reality; I only posted one article that mentions a few of them, but you can easily do a quick Google search and find the rest for yourself.

I'd ask you not to jump to conclusions about me. I make no insinuation about who might really have done this IF it's a fake, or why they might have done it. I also will make no guesses about why the US version doesn't seem to be consistent with some aspects of the story as we know it.

It may not have anything whatsoever to do with this case, but I'm sure you're aware that many groups throughout history have participated in "false flag" operations in order to gain support for their own cause. We've done it, by way of the CIA; the Nazis did it; the Soviets did it; and the Mossad has repeatedly done this.

Who knows? This might have been done by a rival of al-Qaeda or Al-Zarqawi just to bring additional pressure on those groups.

It's entirely likely that the US version of this is largely accurate, but don't led like a bull by the nose so easily. We should hold our own government to the same standards of evidence that we require of everyone else.

By the way, I'm not a Nazi and I've never read Mein Kampf, nor do I have any desire to do so. I'm just as much of an American as you are (I'm assuming by your reaction that you're American) so let's not bring personal attacks into this. Reasonable people should be able to discuss touchy matters like this without resorting to ad hominem attacks.

Regards,
John

Today (Saturday) the weather was no good for the flee market, but there is still enough to see indoors. I did my usual round around Icom, Kenwood, Yaesu, AOR etc., which kept me entertained for most of the day. I did not expect to end up spending most of the time at the Winradio stand as they have some new things, like software-defined shortwave radios etc., and good bargains on radios and antennas. I got a deal on the WR-1550e with some optional software, and a very nice discone antenna.

I did not originally plan to go on Sunday again, but if the weather clears up I might still go to the flee market.

Nope not true. The Patriot Act cannot overide the Constitution which is very clear about due process. Now the Patriot Act might make it easier for LEO's to get a warrant but they cannot come busting in,,,, not yet anyway. I.E. this question was specifically asked of Justice Clarence Thomas by a group of graduating students, and that was the answer he gave. He said if a case ever came to the Supreme Court regarding such a matter, it would be DOA.

I served with the U.S. Marines during the 91 Gulf War,and saw enough mangled and sizzled corpes to last me awhile.
Also was a cop of sorts for a couple years in a big city, and saw quite a few instances of violent death.
I'm not particuliarly squeamish,and I can't say the things I've seen haunt me
- But if my mind was a hard drive,I'd certainly elect to erase portions of it.
I think that most people want to view this clip out of pure morbid curiosity
- Perhaps for the same reasons that drive people to want to see mutilation movies like whats his name freddy kruger,or to go on some outlandish 'amusement' ride roller coaster and get the living crap scared out of them.
Like George said,perhpas some want and need to see it to motivate them as to what were up against .. Or just for a need to know the pure uncensored truth.
But like you said,I can't help but feel that the majority of those who view this or things like it might well wish they hadn't.
Once imprinted on the mind its there to stay.

What he is most likely listening to is the first 30 seconds of the transmission before the system switches over to the full digital encrypted mode. That is analog and then the encryption and digital takes over. The other thing could be that they piggyback up to 5 separate radio transmissions on 1 signal. The one you want to listen to maybe unencrypted but 1 of the other 4 maybe encrypted and your radio can't separate them. In my location we have what they call the state of the art system and they claim that no other place in the world even comes close. Our police, ambulance and fire have been on it for a few years now and yet while searching the 870 MHz and up for cell-phones to listen to I found that I was getting the first 30 seconds of the fire calls and then bang it would switch to digital encryption. One last point is that the different services using the system can change the encryption keys at will and they do this every 4 hours or so.

Wouldn't you agree that there are valid reasons for questioning the story?

1. The military denied having ever held Berg, but we know that they did. Why did they lie about it?

2. The US claimed that al-Zarqawi died months ago, yet they claim that is miraculously him on this video. Which is the truth?

3. Why is Berg still wearing the military-issue orange jumpsuit?

4. Why is Berg sitting in a chair absolutely identical to the chairs seen at Abu Ghraib prison? Are they really that common?

5. Several doctors and surgeons have decided that this decapitation is an obvious fake because of the lack of blood and the lack of reaction by Berg. In their expert opinion, Berg was killed prior to that portion of the video.

6. Why does the US translation of the tape claim that the terrorists used the word "al-Qaeda" when we know that that is not what was said?

7. Why do native speakers of Arabic claim that these men have the wrong accent and are obviously not Iraqis and probably not even native speakers of Arabic?

8. How was Berg's body so quickly identified if he was discovered without his head?

9. Experts in Arabic have carefully analyzed the accent of the man who is supposedly Al-Zarqawi on the video. They say that his accent is definitely not Jordanian, yet Al-Zarqawi is Jordanian.

10. The US originally claimed that it had never held Berg, while saying that the police in Mosul had actually detained him. We know that the US was lying about detaining Berg, and now the Chief of Police in Mosul says that they never held Berg. He states that they are under US authority and are not allowed to arrest Americans. Which do you find more credible in light of the fact that we now know that the US lied about Berg's detention?

11. Some of the captors wore gold rings, which I've been told devout Muslims are not allowed to wear.

12. Al-Zarqawi had a prosthetic leg that severely limited his movement, yet somehow the man proclaimed to be him on the video moves around just fine.

13. Berg is beheaded at 13:47 on the video, yet the portion of the video showing him sitting and intact was filmed at 2:44. Why such a huge time disparity?

14. The captor in the middle wearing the black mask decapitates Berg, yet when he stands up with the head he inexplicably is now wearing a white mask.

15. It's at least interesting but not obviously meaningful that the website that originally hosted the video was physically located in Malaysia and the addresses for the administrators/owners were in London and Denmark.

I don't know about you, but I'm objective enough to at least leave room for some doubt.

Feel free to respond, but I think this is so off-topic for this list that it's not reasonable to continue the discussion here. Besides, I'm so new here that it was rather presumptuous of me to start off-topic disagreements with the list regulars. If someone did that to me on one of the other lists where I regularly participate I would be rather irritated. If I wouldn't accept it elsewhere, I shouldn't be doing it here!

Sounds like the Land of the Free and the home of the brave again. NOT and NOT. After he gets all of his equipment back in court then he can go for unlawful arrest and get them to pay the damages and legal costs.

The guy can't be very smart to post this on the net because I take it that he was already given his rights and now he has made what amounts to a statement that the FCC and police can use in court. Or did the US do away with that law also.

I'd like to quickly follow up on my own post. After a little more research I've decided that the issue about the gold ring doesn't hold water. There is vast disagreement about whether gold rings are forbidden for muslims, but Islam is a non-violent religion. So, if these guys are willing to break other precepts of their religion, why not break the one about wearing gold, too?

Also, I've given more though to the chair issue. Sure, it's exactly the same type of chair seen all over the Abu Ghraib prison, but how many different chairs would be available in that area? Last I checked, they didn't have Walmarts! So, it's not unreasonable to see the same type of chair in more than one location.

On the other hand, he is wearing the orange jumpsuit, and other pictures of Abu Ghraib supposedly show walls and baseboards that are the same color as those seen in the Berg video.

Also, why would the main terrorist go through the trouble of putting on a mask if he's going to announce his name on the video?

The ONLY frequencies that are blocked are from 816 to 904 mHz. I assume this is becuase the R3 couldn't get type accepted for coverage in the normal 800 mHz non cellular band because it couldn't meet the image rejection standards so you don't get cell phone bleed over. Since the R3 doesn't do trunking, losing these frequencies isn't much of a loss. Otherwise, it will pick up every other public safety frequency in the 30 to 50 mHz, 150 to 174 Mhz, and the 450 to 512 mHz bands. Even in areas where agencies have gone to digital trunking, there are still a lot of agencies on non-digital analog frequencies in the above bands. Just go to www.cityfreq.com and put in your state and city and cities surrounding you. You'll find plenty of public service agencies there that you can receive with the R3.

I bought my PCR1000 new for 300, (that's half of what winradio wants for 1550), a new UT-106 for 125. That's a whole lot cheaper than Winradio. Is Winradio REALLY That much Better? For the price? I'm not knocking it, just curious? I've been thinking about buying another radio.

I didn't see the video myself... no desire to... however, I must have missed something: assuming for a moment that the US government was somehow involved in Nick Berg's death, why would the US want to kill him? What was the motive?

Aware of http://radio.linux.org.au/ and http://parnass.com/ , I'm still wondering, as a general rule, what brands of scanners are more likely to have Linux software available?
From desktop scanners to handhelds that include some transmission bands, to plain old car two way radios that aren't even scanners.

Any simple rule, like "don't buy a winmodem" we can apply here?

A short of brands should be easy to remember just in case the opportunity arises and one must make a quick decision.

But supposedly the neighbors telephone came through while the cops were there. And since the neighbor called the police because she could hear her phone through the wall, it would be obvious to the officers that this guy has heard it before. I think that it has been pretty much established here that if this story is true than the guy is a moron for a) letting the police in, and b) not turning his scanner off.

In many cases, having a woodworker build a desk to your specs isn't more - or, at least, very much more than buying a well-built commercial desk.

There are a couple of features that you could "build in". One would be adjustable shelves and another might be either laminating between two pieces of the desk or simply "surfacing the various pieves with sheet copper which could be tied together and grounded.

I've never tried that but it could be "interesting".

Also, you could have have the rear of the "desk top" tilted slightly for ease of use.

Also (grin), you can build your AC distribution in. I have done that and it /really/ beats "the usual mess".

The same thing can be done by building in antenna inputs/outputs.

And it's a chance to have two very nice speakers built into the desk.

Want any more suggestions [bwg]?

Find a contractor that updates kitchens and pick up two or three old base cabinets (the ones with drawers) that he has removed while installing new cabinets. Bridge them (adjust the height of bridge between cabinets to desk height, aprox 28 /30 in.) to fit your space with plywood or MDF, paint/finish to suit your self, cover with plastic laminate. Start calling CQ. RM~

PS, If you are located in large city/town, look for a business that deals in surplus building material, they sometimes have real good prices on surplus plastic laminate.

Yes, the 1550 is (IMHO) much better than the PCR, but please don't take my word for it - try them both (as I did). As to the price difference, well yes, I would not expect them to be the same price - it's enough just to look closely at the quality of the mechanical construction and the reason is already obvious there. Plus there is more of course. I would not expect to buy a Ferrari for the price of a Ford, even though a Ford would get me from A to B too - but who would not prefer to drive a Ferrari... :-)

(That silly analogy might not be so silly after all - the 1550 scans about 3 times faster than the PCR. And even faster with the Signal Classifier function which is part of the Advanced Digital Suite...)

I am using a purple cable along with their usb/serial interface cable and Windows XP-Pro. I have successfully downloaded the data from the pro92 into the computer. After editing and adding several frequencies, I am trying to upload to the scanner.

The problem(s) are these: If I have "enable read back tests" checked on in the serial configuration, I get a message upon attampting upload that says "Expected to read back the data we just wrote and this failed..." the com port is correct, etc. the only way I can get it to appear to upload is by unchecking the "enable read back tests." When I do that and try to upload, the computer acts as if the data is sending but the scanner says "sending data" instead of "receiving data" during the upload to the scanner. And after that completes and I check the scanner after "upload" only the original data is there.

Nothing came across from Win 92 and the computer. When I try to verify the data using Win92, it tells me that the verify failed." Any suggestions would be appreciated.

Thanks. CC

If I remember right, after you download the freqs from the radio to the computer, you have to unplug the cable from the radio and then plug it back into the radio before you can upload back to the radio.

That's ok, because I use the aluminum foil hat which protects me from alien brain R.F. sucking as a parabolic reflector, thereby increasing the gain of the little 8" whip antenna on my Pro-95 about 80 dB.

Go to www.radioreference.com. You'll find everything you ever wanted to know about digital systems there.

And no, your (now) ancient Pro 60 is not digital, it's analog. The only digital Rat Shack scanner is the Pro 96.

Yeah I guess if you want something done right, do it yourself. I've downloaded some workbench plans and will improvise on those. Need heavy duty wood tho - lots of radios and a huge old ART13 military transmitter that weighs 80+ lbs, so I'm thinking 2X8s, pressure treated. Home Depot said if I have all the measurements they will cut the wood for me. Going with pine and will add some corner plates to it - should look good and be nice and sturdy. My wife is jumping in on the project, too - going to run each piece thru her arts and crafts room and take a butane torch to it and bring out the grain and stain it nice. Not only will I have it the way I want, but I think it will be more affordable as well. Looks like a good weekend project - thanks all for the suggestions. I'm off to Home Depot:)

Hi Folks!
This past weekend (5/16/2004) I visited a local flea-market where I found an AOR AR-2500 scanner/monitor. I figured the guy would want $100 for it. Nope, he said he couldn't make it work and that numbers only scrolled across the display. $4.00 (four dollars). "Sold!" It has a power supply that looks modified as the cord appears to have been cut and + and - swapped. All this heat shrunk. Inside the radio there is a wire and transistor that appears to be connected to one of the front controls. The transistor also goes to a connector inside. The wire was loose on the control. All this also was heat-shrunk. I put it on a lighter-jack after getting hum with the 300mA power supply, and it seems to work OK! Lot's of intermod, however! There was aluminum/vinyl tape over some parts, and I've just read in the groups here that this might be factory! Might this transistor 'mod' be factory, too? Also, there appears to be a brown wire cut out of one of the harnesses. Other than this, it seems to be OK.
Anyway, is this transistor stuff a cellular mod? Is the 300mA supply under rated? This scanner gets warm and must be drawing more than 300mA.
Some strange behaviors: There is an up/down knob. Turning it right seems to raise the channels, and turning it left lowers the banks. Is that right?
The down button seems to do nothing. Sel Bank button takes a few seconds to work. There is a red line (marker?) through the delete button and off the button to the side. Could all this be factory?
Thanks!
Harry

Yes, I've seen them both, both inside and outside. And I can't imagine what you mean by 'quality of the mechanical construction' as being such a differentiation.

Hello friends
I am wondering why Radio shack has gotten away from aggressively marketing scanner radio's? There was a time that i could walk into any radio shack. And they had every model that they carried at the time up and running and took the time to show you how they worked.. I don't know about your Radio shacks. But the ones around here don't even have them on display! They are in their boxes behind the counter. How are you going to sell a scanner in a box behind a counter? Our community could have scanners flying off the shelves in the days leading up to the "G8" summit. Especially with the assistant county police chief in a public meeting related to the summit urging people to buy a scanner so they'd know what was really going on around town in the weeks leading up to and during the summit. I encourage you to point your browsers to http://members.tripod.com/scanglynncounty and tune into my live scanner feed. It will not be up 24/7 as I only have one trunk tracker. However it is up and running at the moment and will be during the evening and early morning hours. I usually take it off the air at or around 11:00 but only for a short period of time. I'd love to hear from everyone . Please be sure to leave a note in my guestbook! :) Steve Huh? Why should he do that? AND, what the heck are you talking about when you claim he's been abusive? To whom?

I simply saw the post 'New Canadian....dealer' and I decided, since I needed an accessory, to contact him. Again, he replied quicky and was friendly. As he didn't stock the item, he referred me to someone who would be able to help. No cash for him, but he helped me. Is that abusive?

Well the piece of wood I have the ART13 on is 11" wide, about 1 1/4" thick, and as long as the hutch (54"), and it doesn't sag in the middle. 2x4 sagged in the middle with no support. Pressboard is out of the question. This is the only piece of wood I found strong enough to support almost a 100 lbs of radio and computer monitor on top shelf of hutch...

Your right about the support. I've built benches that would support a lot of weight using nothing bigger than 1X's and 3/4 in MDF and plywood but have used plenty of support, aprox every 18 in. under the top surface. Regardless of the structure that you choose, I'd skip the pressure treated stuff for indoor use. They don't recommend it for anything other than out door use (decks, fences and etc.). You have to use either hot dipped galvanized or stainless steel fasteners, anything else will rot out the newer pressure treated stuff. Also some of the chemicals used for treating can be a hazard, particularly when burned.

Interesting comms today: some concerning one of the nation's newest acft, the F/A-22 now at Tyndall AFB, and some about the good old days when "The Real Stuff" was going on at Cape Canaveral, and I was there.

Those of us who were here in the 1960s Hey-days of the space program, remember the ever-present Zantop acft at Patrick AFB, supporting operations. Nice to hear them chat and to feel the nostalgia of my days during the Gemini missions and the Saturn-Apollo moon-landing flights. I used to monitor the action right from the beach in those days.

I honestly do not know WHAT to make of Berg affair, although there is the vague but unmistakable whiff of fish in the air.

I'd like to broaden this question. Is there a precedent for a "staged death" scenario? The motif is fairly common in spy novels and films: "The Third Man" and "You Only Live Twice" both come to mind.

I seem to recall reading of a deception of this sort that took place in real life. The trouble is, I've read a lot of "true life" espionage books, and the details start to run together. I know that someone once proposed this as a solution (albeit not a very likely solution) for the Valentich disappearance, but that's not the incident I'm trying to recall here.

Is my memory playing tricks, or was there once a case where someone connected with some intelligence agency faked his death?

Do you find it easier to attack people rather than discuss or rebut the points they make?

For example, you might try saying something like this: "Those points that you all mention seem to be on rather shaky ground. While they appear to have some validity on the surface, I don't find that I can agree with them until I see more evidence. Until you can show me proof that you're right, I'd prefer to believe the word of our leaders."

Or, you could try a more direct approach: "Can you back any of this up? Have you actually researched any of these claims yourself? If not, come back when you can do more than speculate or spread rumors."

You're right, that's way too many words. :) It's a lot easier just to attack people with short, barbed sentences and ignore the rest of the discussion.

By the way, isn't anyone here familiar with Godwin's law? Here's the current definition for those paying attention:

Godwin's Law prov. [Usenet] "As a Usenet discussion grows longer, the probability of a comparison involving Nazis or Hitler approaches one." There is a tradition in many groups that, once this occurs, that thread is over, and whoever mentioned the Nazis has automatically lost whatever argument was in progress. Godwin's Law thus practically guarantees the existence of an upper bound on thread length in those groups. However there is also a widely-recognized codicil that any intentional triggering of Godwin's Law in order to invoke its thread-ending effects will be unsuccessful.

John

Sidney George Riley, perhaps. He was called "The Ace of Spies", and some even believe that he was the model for James Bond. And, on-topic, some believe he faked his own death.

I believe that some people feel that Glenn Miller's death was faked. I don't know know anything about that, though.

An even more pertinent question would be this: do intelligence agencies have a track record of faking events or information in order to bring about a desired outcome?

The resounding answer is "yes". Every major intelligence agency does this on a regular basis. And, yes, the CIA and Mossad do it just as often as everyone else.

If you really want to have your mind blown, do a Google search on "Operation Northwoods".

Have fun! :) Does any of it sound familiar?

The AOR 2500 and the AOR 2515 were very similar models. The 2515 was actually produced before the 2500.

Regarding the power supply, which I presume should be the same, the stock AOR supply (part number AA2001) that came with my 2515 is rated at 500 milliamps / 12 volts.

I have an old Channel Master antenna (looks like the Scantenna, http://users.cis.net/kingpop/Scanner/Scantenna.htm.)

I have had this antenna for 17 years, it has been an awesome antenna! Well yesterday we had a big wind storm, 60+ MPH. The bottom half of the antenna was ripped off. I found it 50' away in the yard. (BTW the antenna is about 30' in the air).

When I got home last night I fired up my scanner expecting to hear nothing (very rural area, most of what I listen to is 25+ miles away).

But to my surprise I could not notice any loss of reception! All the usual stations were there..

Can anyone offer and explantion? How can a dipole antenna still work so well with the entire bottom half gone?

Thanks

If you had a really good signal strength meter you would probably notice that the received signal strength had dropped 3dB. Not normally enough for the human ear to tell. Particularly across a period of time, with most power switches being part of the volume control...

Strange sound, not heterodynes. SSB can do some funny stuff demodulating a shifting (other type of ) modulated carrior.

I bought this on Ebay, and the software is fine except that it will not successfully download the frequency list to the radio. I get the CL ERR message right at the end of the download. Does anyone else have this problem?

some of the Radio Shacks around here don't even have them at all!!!!

and the one that does have some only had one model they carried which was a RACE scanner.

Some lady came in looking for a scanner to hear the police, fire, and medical services on, and the clerk tried to sell her a RACE scanner as one.

Luckily for her, she didn't fall for it.

The radio shacks around here used to carry them years ago, but recently none around here do that I know of except one, which carries only a RACE scanner model.

I just got it yesterday and have not had any problems with it. I bet I uploaded to the radio 20 times. Try changing the speed and see if that helps. Could it also be that you are trying to put a freq in the radio that is out of range?

Yes the mast is grounded... I guess I thought with a dipole it would be worthless without it's bottom half, or at least seriously compromised.

There is a pawn shop locally that has a PRO-2035 by Radio Shack. Excellent shape, tons of bands & 1000 channel memory. Anyone here have one & would you suggest buying one? What is an average used price?

Can you suggest any other radios that have the most frequencies for the cheapest price? Looking for a home unit base. No handheld, but maybe mobile.

Thanks!

This is all going to depend on if your local PD and FD are on a trunking system or not. If they are then pass on the 2035. BTW how much are they asking for it?

Look for used dispatch consoles from your local agencies. They usually sell them for scrap.

I picked up an old AOR AR160 scanner, a programmable, 16 channel mobile radio with no digital display.
I've figured out how to make it search, but can't get it to store the channels I have found.
Anyone have the programming instructions for this thing? I'd love to have a copy of the manual, or at least some idea how to work it.

Thanks,

John

No problems around here. They NEVER aggressively marketed them here either. They currently have at least 4 models on display... If you want to see one work, them are more than happy to hook it up for you. No idea where you live, but there is only one store in my local area, and it is a pretty small one compared to the ones I've seen in larger cities/areas... Funny that they would take the time to so something that a larger store does not.

Nope, you just re-invented the quarter wave whip antenna, with your mast providing the counterpoise... ;-)

Can't tell from the provided picture, but if the elements on the top and bottom were different sizes, you may have lost more than 3dB at the frequency ranges the bottom half was tuned for...

Might be interesting to know how well just your mast does... :-)

The elements are the same top and bottom.. actually the very top 7 feet or so of my mast is a wooden rod with the other 20 or so feet being a standard metal mast.. interesting..

I could use the broken half as a second antenna!!

Here in Calgary Alberta Canada, finding a scanner at Radio Shack is impossible, the only one they carry is the Uniden Trunk Tracker hand held, and it must be specially ordered. Radio Shack, in Canada, many years ago, had all kinds, and were quite knowlagable about them, now they just give a dumb look.

I use the Icom software to program the IC-R5. I had a similar error message when I entered scanning frequencies in the 800 MHz range.
When I sent the list to the IC-R5 from the software, the upload would get close to completion then the error message would pop up.

When I removed those frequencies - I think it was 821 MHz and so on- I was able to upload to the IC-R5 without an error message.

I think I may have solved this. In my initial attemps to download the list to the radio, I don't think I started with a File>New, and I was just adding to and editting a (somehow) corrupted data set. If I "new" it first, then edit it, it will download without error to the radio. I have only put in 25 or so local airport freqs, and nothing at all in the 800 MHz range at all, so that problem might still be there.

Only one local PD is trunking & it is in the 857.000 range. The pawn shop wants $275 but I have seen them go for as low as $80.

I would like a scanner that will cover nearly everything from 25-1300. I heard the Uniden BC350-C is a good one for that.

Any suggestions?

This is all going to depend on if your local PD and FD are on a trunking system or not. If they are then pass on the 2035. BTW how much are they asking for it?

I left my scanner in the bathroom at the local Wendys. When I returned to get it, I found a customer playing with it (the scanner) while he ate his hamburger.

I told him it was my scanner and he asked me to prove it.

I told him a lot of the frequencies in there.
I told him I could pick up cordless phone freqeuencies, like the ones at Wendys..

Well he tried that and the Wendys employees called the police.
The police took away my radio. I have rights!

I have a lawyer. What can I do?

Tell the police that leaving the battery connected will drain it so much the memories will be lost. With a bit of luck they'll take the battery pack off and by the time it gets to court the memories will be lost and there will be no evidence to prosecute you.

2947. Listening to TV audio

Quick question..

If I purchase the scanner in US, would I be able to listen to TV audio in different region (lets say, India)? In US, we use NTSC system, compared to PAL in India. But that is applicable only in video.

Any help would be appreciated. TIA.

Here we go again :/ If you search more on strongsignals, you will find a ton of people comparing the two radios. I for one like the PRO-96 over the 296 for a few reasons. Here is my small list of what I like about the 96: V-folders, ease of use, no digital card to worry about, AA batteries over the battery pack, Battery life, Upgradable DSP, Digital AGC

I dialed up 10.512 MHz a couple of nights ago. I began to belive that this posting was someone's idea of a joke, as all I heard was some Spanish-speaking stations talking back and forth,like many of them do on what they think are "private and unused by anyone else frequencies". The next day, I heard the "music" - it wasn't too strong here in the Pacific NW about 5:00 PM PDST Local time, and weaker yet at 11:00 PM. I couldn't hear it at all early this morning (6:00 AM).

Very interesting!

Yes, a very strange signal indeed. The odd thing is that on both sides would be "alien contact sound No.1"

2965. Most Common 900 Phone Frequencies?

What would folks say are the most common (dozen or so) 900mhz phone frequencies? I figure I would add a dozen or so into my scanner, but did not want to sit down and plug in hundreds of frequencies.

Well I can, actually, because I have both. The PCR case is made of cheap folded sheet metal. When I bought it, it was already slightly rusty inside. The WR1550e is housed in a beautiful, solidly made, powder-coated aluminium extrusion. It does show that this manufacturer has attention to detail.

In any case, I believe George does not make this his sole differentiation - read his post carefully.

All it shows is that the manufacturer has access to the same boxes used by the $20 12v-110v inverter makers that are also packaged in a 'beautiful solidly made power coated aluminum extrusions'.

I do have to admit that those 'looks' helped a lot when I sold mine [while keeping my pcr1000 that is 'beautifully compact' in its' custom designed case and fits much better in my briefcase too...]

For me, the case wasn't worth 2x the price for indistinguishable differences in performance.

For those of you with a Pro-92 scanner, could you please tell me what it says on the LCD screen when you are uploading data from your computer into the scanner? Mine says "Sending Data". (Even when it should be receiving data.) Does yours by chance say "Receiving data"? THe local radio shack doesn't deal with them any more.

I'm trying to solve a problem I'm having with uploading.

Thanks

It looks a nice scanner but the price is rather beyond my range.
Maplin do the IC-R5 for ï¿½129.95 in the Wrexham branch, I'd have one of them if I was looking for a new scanner.
I think my Yupi 7100 will do OK for a bit longer.

Do you have any comparision how these things compete in pure receiving skills on shortwave and on VHF-AIR, weather-sat receiving?
I do not(!) want to speak on the software capabilities :-)
I have the PCR1000 and I use 3rd party soft for decoding and the ICOM soft for tuning and swwitching the PCR so far as some decoding progs do not support remote control of the PCR1000.

My advise? Never approach a man playing with it in a bathroom, while

Chris,

You're technically downloading data from the computer to the scanner. I'm assuming you're using Win92. When I'm uploading from the scanner to the PC, the screen says "Sending Data". When I'm dowloading from the PC to the computer, the screen first says "Receive Data" and then "Sending Data" for the data verification phase. What problems are you having exactly with uploading (or downloading, as the case may be).

Best bet is to just set your scanner to do a "limit search" between 902-907 MHz. You may also find activity between 925-928 MHz.

If your scanner is more than 6 months old and cost less than $500, it is not capable of decoding digital signals.

From looking at your ISP, it appears you are in the US, so why would we share frequencies with you that are illegal to intentionally monitor (which

Military Radios Jam Garage Door Opener Remotes

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE - A new military two-way radio system is keeping garage doors shut in communities near this [Florida] Panhandle base, and residents might have to change the frequencies on their remote-controlled opening devices to make them work.

Homeowners in Niceville, Valparaiso and the Crestview area reported jammed garage door openers during recent testing of the $5.5 million system at Eglin.

Air Force officials said Tuesday that the contractor, Motorola, will try to minimize the problem, but they offered no guarantees.

Technicians will run the system at slightly different frequencies in another test this weekend.

The problem might spread to residents near other military bases. A similar system has been requested for Pensacola Naval Air Station.

Agreed. And, I sometimes do that. If I had to say "what are the most common frequencies" on the older phones I would say: 43.72, 44.12, 46.71, 46.97

I was hoping that, in fact, the modern 900 mhz phones would mainly settle down into just a few "most common" frequencies --I could then plug into my scanner. That would allow to me "scan" for them directly in conjunction with other frequencies. Rather than "nursemaid" the scanner and jogging between scan and limit search.

Went to a blockwide yard sale this SAT morning. A woman had a Radio Shack Pro-2037 I bought for $5. She was finishing up her sale and had had $35 on it. Said it was practically brand new and she knew nothing about it (which she clearly did not). I offered her $5 which she declined. I smiled and walked away, she changed her mind and sold it to me. To be honest, I have a dozen scanners bought precisely the same way --and with the same nonchalance-- at sales. I didn't really care whether I bought it or not. My habit is generally to "loan out" some of these extra scanners to friends --to see if I can get them hooked on the scanner hobby. Some folks take to it, some don't.

I used to have a Pro 60, it is an analog scanner. When recieving digital transmissions, it will only come out as noise.

Those are autopatch calls. The person making them knows that anyone else on the frequency can hear them. There are specific rules for making an autopatch call: you can't swear and you can't use it for business purposes.
Listening to those calls is not against any electronic monitoring laws since they are made over a public repeater.
In fact, before I had a cell phone my car broke down on a highway offramp in Phoenix, Arizona. I used a repeater autopatch to call the Highway Patrol for a push off the ramp. Someone else on the repeater heard my call and showed up before the the Highway Patrol did to help out.

There are several RR feeds on Shoutcast; however, I don't know whether they duplicate listings you already have.

The problem I was having is that I was trying to determine if my scanner was bad and whether or not to send it in for repair, since I could not get it to say "Receiving data" when the data was being transferred from the computer to the Scanner ("Upload to Scanner" in Win92).

I had been using Windows XP Pro and finally tried and entirely different computer (Win 98 Second Edition) and the same cables (the Purple cable and a USB/Serial Adapter from www.Pfranc.com)

It worked with the older cWindows 98 computer just fine. (The USB/serial adabpter is not in the link) and Windows XP Pro is not being used.

So thanks, I got my problem solved.

The bottom line I guess is there is something that doesn't jive between a Pro-92B, The purple cable, the USB serial interface and Windows XP Pro.

I just picked-up a Pro-96 last weekend and today I was going through the manual trying out different features. The feature I was trying out when I ran into a problem was the "weather alert demonstration."
Before I go into the steps I followed to run into the problem, I must warn anyone who tries this that I locked-up the radio and the only way out was to wipe the memory. So if you try to reproduce this have a way to get your frequencies back into the radio.
I had the radio in WX mode listening to the local weather broadcast.
The manual says to press FUNC and hold down WX to activate the weather alert demonstration. However when I do this the demonstration never happens and the radio appears to be locked-up. Cycling the power doesn't get it out. Pressing the reset button on the side doesn't help either. The only way to restore the radio to normal operation is to do a factory reset (and loose all of your memory channels). Has anyone else noticed this problem?

The scanner is not the problem, since you got it to work under Windows 98, with a normal serial cable arrangement.

Sometimes there can be conflicts (comm settings or drivers, for instance) when you use a serial-to-USB converter ... as you did with the computer running Windows XP.

There can also be conflicts if something else is sharing the same port, such as a modem, mouse, PDA, etc.

You might want to check the comm port settings on the two computers - atleast for the ports you used in your test - and look at how the settings on the XP compare to the Windows 98 PC.

If you are using Win92, consider contacting Don Starr for advice, and check for any ".ini" files related to the comm port in the program.

I would also try borrowing a different make of serial-to-USB converter from someone, and trying that out. The difficulties that the converters can add to the equation are enough that some software writers - notably Butel (ARC 780 and ARC 250) - don't offer technical support for their programs when the converters are used.

Hi Klaus - those 4 or 5 you mention pretty much covers it here, too.
One question tho - was that a scanner that could hear down to Diego Garcia, or was that a wide band receiver with a good HF antenna? Seems to me that the feed you mention is very familiar.
There are a few of those on the net, too, come to think of it.

Chris,

I see your problem. I had exactly the same problem on my XP box trying to use a serial to USB converter. Most of them just don't seem to work very well. I solved the problem by getting a $15 serial board. Now I have one port dedicated to that board and Win92 works just fine.

we do tend to be a fairly friendly lot out here in the "old west". :)

BTW, what local repeaters/simplex frequencies do you hang around on?

I can be found on 146.520 Simplex most of the time and perhaps on the 146.940 Mhz machine here in the phoenix area. mostly though, I lurk. :)

If I recall they were selling small Gunnplexers (?) and all one had to do was hook up a 9 volt battery to them with a switch.

Hook it up, aim it out your windshield, trigger the switch and watch all the

Actually, I think it's Honda (and maybe Cadilac too now) that provide what's called 'smart' or 'adaptive' cruise control that uses a system like this to 'space off' a vehicle in front of you and not close on it.

Yes, the OPP are OPPressive when it comes to devices that let citizens, er... 'subjects', know what the police are doing. But, they will have a hard time nailing you for just a 'transmitter', especially if there is no way to 'receive' another signal strictly as a field strength.

But officer, it's not a radar detector! It's an application specific field strength indicator...

Hi all,
I am attempting to alter a Regency MX3000 scanner to receive weather image signals from NOAA satellites, and I really need to see a schematic. I have been told that the filtering is too narrow, and needs to be a minimum of 30 or 40 kHz. Can anyone help me out?

Hello,

Just wondering if it's possible to listen to the Toronto Subway system?

I was under the impression this was impossible, due to proprietary trunking / security functions of the TTC underground radio system. Yet, I read a post on the Yahoo scanner site a while ago and was told not only was listening to the subway possible, it's very easy - provided you're on the platforms / trains. (Or very close to a station)

So, I have no idea what to believe except radio is radio. Unless totally encrypted, a full coverage receiver should be able to hear them. Other TTC stuff is easy, but the trains themselves I've yet to monitor.

Any ideas?
Mike T.

I'm usually on the 442.8 repeater on South Mountain when I'm in my car. I just have a handheld radio right now so I leave everything connected in my car. Since my radio is a Kenwood D7-A I'm also on APRS all the time.

I've heard you on the air before. I haven't poked around much on 440 lately. the handheld just doesn't have the juice to make it many places from here in west phoenix. I really need to get a 440 mobile and let fly.

btw, you wouldn't happen to know where one can acquire some used 1/2" hardline, would you? this rg-213 (mil-9913) has far too much loss on 440 for my taste.

Now that could look cruel to anyone, but beasts need to be treated

Hello all,
i am the owner of an Ic-R1 that i would love also to use for BCL.
Well as soon as i put a long wire to the antenna plugh, i don't hear anything but hear like i am putting the power on and off continuously. for sure the little bastard is oscillating, probably because he can't digest the signals.
Any ideas about how to make his stumach stronger?

Ask your lawyer! That's what lawyers are for ya know! (well they have a few other uses too actually, but I'll not go into that here...:-)

And next time, be more careful with your scanner and don't leave it laying around!

Yeah. Couldn't get anything recognizable with my AOR AR8600 and an LPY2 antenna. Being digitally modulated, it wouldn't be useful for anything anyway. I think the antennas for the satellite radio receivers are amplified, so without that extra gain, a typical receiver couldn't really pick it out of the noise floor.

The antenna I have for my XM receiver said "high gain" if I remember right, but it itsn't powered.

Is it possible to amplify a signal with just a small transformer at the antenna without any power going to it?

3044. Gettysburg Under Attack – 282.2000 MHz Comms

As I reported earlier about Gettysburg comms on 282.000 I have uploaded the audio file of which I recorded of this possibly (at least I hope) exercise. These comms were snagged on 282.2000 MHz starting around 1800 EDT. Unfortunately I was moving some computers around in the shack and couldnï¿½t record the entire operation. The transmission mentioned something about a Kilo Class Submarine. Next mention was referencing ASW aircraft. Few minutes later heard another station callsign EchoZulo. lat/long given were 26-00N, 56-49E (about 1400 miles East of Miami). Other callsign heard were Gettysburg and XrayZulo. Also mention made of ï¿½unknown Iranian surface unitsï¿½. Gettysburg was the callsign giving the above info. Proud Warrior was to launch.

You can access the audio file here:

The problem with this approach is that it would probably take out most every imam in the Muslim world, including those who lead medrassas here in the United States. We're in enough heat for "invading" Iraq as it is (even though this war has nothing to do with Islam that I'm aware of).

I am agnostic, so I don't subscribe to any religion, be it Christianity, Islam, Judaism, Zoroastrianism, Hinduism, Jainism... etc. All organized religions are equally repugnant to me. Yet I question the ultimate effectiveness of waging a war of ideals on over 1 billion believers of any religion. How do you educate the "believers" of their folly, while at the same time they are thinking you are trying to destroy them? "Re-education" in prison camps doesn't count.

For what it is worth, I have read the Qu'ran, and have read several interpretations of both it and the Hadiths (the supposed sayings of Mohammed). The Qu'ran is supposedly best interpreted in the original Arabic, and I've been told that I cannot truly understand the Qu'ran unless I speak Arabic. To me, this is a convenient excuse, since most of the literate world doesn't speak Arabic anyway. Seems that Western-style democracy and strict Islam have a ways to go "before meets the 'twain". I don't know if that can reasonably be expected to happen, even here in the US.

Strict Islam does not seem to be able to understand the fact that it should be able to survive without government approval (Turkey being the main exception that I can think of). What does that tell you of a religion-- that it has to be mandated by the state to survive? Cannot it survive of its own accord and of its own merits? If not, then why should a reasonable person fail to question the entire religion and what it stands for?

On the "up" side of things, I personally know several Muslims who've embraced Western ways since moving here, and they are delighting in the freedoms to be found here in the US. They still go to masjid and pray towards Makkah 5 times per day. They have a choice in the matter here, however, which is very telling of the differences between our nation and the ones they came from (national identities deleted to protect the guilty parties).

The one XM antenna I took apart (while the owner looked on nervously) had active circuitry. DC power is run up the coax; a simple capacitor is all that is needed to decouple the DC from the RF signal. I only ever looked at one, so there may be other approaches, too.

Is Sirius similar? I need an external NON-mag mount antenna that's water tight as well. Don't mind drilling a mount hole cause I have an antenna farm going up on the vans roof rack. If anyone knows of a cool antenna pass it on. The home antenna works well for now.

My Pro-2026 won't remember channels anymore.

I pulled it apart, and on the bottom side of the breadboard that houses the main CPU, there is a horseshoe looking component that has seperated right down the middle.

Any idea if this is the culprit? Did some other component used to live in that spot, or can I simply solder the two halves of the horseshoe together and get it to remember channels again?

Thanks.

Does anyone here use a frequency counter to find frequencies "on-site"? It looks like Optoelectronics is a big vendor of them. How useful are they? What features are important in a frequency counter?

The Gettysburg is a Ticonderoga class cruiser (CG64). It is currently stationed somewhere in the Persian Gulf. The Kilo reference is probably to the three Russian-built Kilo class submarines owned by the Iranian Navy. They rarely put to sea because of serious engineering problems and have no SSM capability The Iranian Navy only has two Saam class frigates with any SSM missile capability. They are armed with the Italian-built Sea Killer system and it's unlikely that these systems are operational since the Italians haven't sold them any reloads since 1988 and the missles were all expended in the Iran-Iraq war. There are a few small Chinese-built missile boats that may still have operational Sea Eagle missiles but their range is only about 30 km. Given all this, I assume this must have been an exercise, especially given the low stress levels of the voices. If it had been a real missle attack, the Gettysburg would have fired off her Harpoons and been taking anti-missile measures like firing chaff blooms long before this transmission was over.

I have a couple of the RS counters. The last one I picked up was the 22-306 model. Got it on store closeout for $40...

I also have 2 of their earlier models. When I got the 306, I should have looked and bought every one I could find.

Only bad thing about the 306 is the selectable gate uses a 50-50 ratio to count and display. For example, in one case it counts for say 10 seconds to get an accurate count, then displays for 10 seconds, then counts, then displays....
It would have been a trivial matter is firmware to count for the gate, transfer to display, then reset the gate and count again. That way with a 1 second gate you'd get counts updating every 1.01 or so seconds instead of 2 seconds.
Still, not too bad. Except for low frequecies when it does a 10 second or so gate and only updates the display every 20 seconds.

If you have one of the 1st units with the three wire hookup,try this:

To alleviate the problem with loss of memory if the radio loses complete power for any reason, I connected a battery pack to the orange wire from the radio and I do not connect the orange wire to 12v power source, Its set up the same as the BC-760xlt.

3064. Trying to save an old Icom R1

I have owned an R1 for the past 10+ years and use it occasionally. As the only local authorized Icom repair shop has told me (who I now believe to be a total scam artist) 'If you don't occasionally use the radio, the internal battery will die and have to be replaced'. So, the last time this happened I attempted to unsolder and remove/replace the internal CL2020-1VC myself. My soldering skills suck and I ended up having the scammer fix this for me as well as replace the internal NiCd battery (P-03ER/F23G1). I'm pulling these part numbers from the service manual BTW. Well, another 2 years have passed and I haven't used the radio in a while and of course the R1 is completely dead again. No amount of charging (with the ac adapter) will bring it back up. So I decide to try to fix it agin myself. I take the radio apart and what do I find? The scammer NEVER REPLACED the CL2020, there is just an empty space where the battery should be.

So, Problem #1 - I'm having trouble sourcing a CL2020-1VC. I'm not sure if that 1VC means 1 volt or not because all the CL2020's I've seen say they are 3 volts. I'll also need a sleeve for it to solder it back on the board (I have a much better soldering iron now, maybe that will help). Getting the battery with the sleve already would be great.

Problem #2 - How can I test the internal NiCd? I don't understand why it's not charging. If I need another one I will need a source for that as well.

You may have guessed I know next to nothing about electronics but I'm looking to learn, thanks for any help you can provide!

Matt

If left uncharged, the internal battery runs down. The radio may need a

Started monitoring around 1300 EDT today. Callsigns ROCKO, GOLITH, OAKGROVE so far. Freqs: 284.5000 (SEALORD), 333.3000 (A/A); 376.3500 (??), 264.5000 (NORAD). GOLITH specifically mentioned that this was an exercise in support of the G8 Summit.

376.3500 was a frequency mentioned by GOLITH, I donï¿½t have any listing for this freq. However did confirm GOLITH was using it.

Also I heard mention of HF 11.209, I might have heard this on another scanner not related to the G8 exercise so I donï¿½t know if it is noteworthy or not.

Is the R1 one of those radios that will loose it's own internal operating system
if the battery goes totally dead?

Yep, there's a few of those out there. Don't recall if the R1 is one of them though.

I remember seeing aftermarket kits for some of the ICOM radios that did that.
One kit for one of the radios even had 'downloadable' operating system over the serial port, but always had an 'on board eprom' sort of like a BIOS to at least always be able to bring the radio up from dead.

I thought the concept was pretty neat, actually. Just the implementation was brain dead.

I have been listening to Gananoque Police for years and just recently the tower and cars became unintelligible. I believe it may be voice inversion as I am not sure they can do half digital/analog? I am also not so sure they could afford digital in the small town.

Would anyone be willing to listen to it and tell me, or point me to a inversion program to find out.

The inversion program you might be looking for is in the files section of the OttawaScan Yahoo Group.

I'm sure you know where that is?

Try these sites

Check the town or city where the racetrack is located to find the frequencies for the tracks owners, venders and local police/fire/EMS.

<http://www.cityfreq.com/mi/brooklyn/>

And some NASCAR sites that may have frequencies:

<http://motorsports.thepaddock.com/freqs.html>

<http://w8akr.dynip.com:8080/info.htm>

some frequency information:

<http://www.speedfx.com/article.asp?artnum=8541>

<http://www.telcoweb.net/racing.html>
<http://www.strongsignals.net/index.cgi>

GOT TO THE BOTTOM OF THE MESSAGE BOARDS!
Look at the bottom of the frequency board for lots of data bases through out the country and world!
Look up your local and the NASCAR track's frequencies to see if they us trunking radio and/or APCO-25 DIGITAL radios

Another place to look is the air band for helicopters that bring VIP's and drivers to the races and the air ambulance helicopter. Also the military aircraft fly by at the start of the race should show up, on the air band!
A check of

< http://www.airnav.com>

will turn up some tower, approach and departure frequencies. LOOK FOR A HELIPAD! They will have to be around thirty (30) to fifty (50) miles from your location to receive the aircraft side of the communications. To receive the ground side that would be the TOWER, DPARTURE/APPROCH control, HELIPAD or the ground side of the ARTCC stations remote transceivers, your location/receiver has to be within range, that's three (3) to ten (10) miles of an air band ground station!.

Scroll down to the bottom of the" airnav" airport pages for your airport, to see if any web links for business at the airport, have air band frequencies listed..
You should be able to hear both sides of the air band VHF-AM communications from any HELIPAD adjacent to the speedway!

They may use DISCONE antennas with there radios, which then send/receive skyward.

Another consideration is bringing/using a radio scanner aboard airlines and check out the thread at rec.radio.scanner regarding that.

<http://www.fordyce.org/scanning/scanning_info/scan_fly.html>

If you would lake to see a great BAND PLAN for the air band look at New Users FAQ on strongsignals.net , go to ☐Frequently Asked Frequencies☐ go to the bottom to see who's on what part of the band. This can help narrow down a search to find unknown frequencies.

Two other New Users FAQ sections is "What's illegal" and" CTCSS & DCS (aka PL & DPL)" NASCAR web sites also mention states that ban radio scanners and/or require permits!

I really like the preprogrammed SERVICE SEARCH capabilities of the UNIDEN® radio scanners.
They search at three hundred (300) steps a second and allow LOCK OUT of unwanted frequencies during the search, it includes the civilian VHF air band!
The UNIDEN® BC 250D has racing frequencies preprogrammed into the SERVICE SEARCH and dose S.A.M.E. weather alert! It also covers the Military UHF 220MHz-400 MHz air band! It also has PL tone capability. Down load a manual at Uniden® web site and check it out.

Here's a vendor that supports racing radios

http://www.racingelectronics.com/

They may sell and download racing frequencies at the track, possibly free for folks who purchase (Uniden® SC200 and there own Racing Electronics RC 2000) radios, form them! The SC 200 will search out PL/DPL tones. The RC 2000 can use PL/DPL tones BUT WILL NOT SEARCH THEM OUT! You have to know them, another good reason to have a vendor 'load'
racing frequencies,
IF THIS INCLUDES PL/DPL codes, into the radio at the track! NOTE everything in the radio will be overwritten, you will loose frequencies/PL when a down load is done,

Take along a list of frequencies for the track, police EMTs and air band. Then after a vendor loads up the racing frequencies ,key your list into another bank
(if they aren't already loaded) if something happens or when your leaving, bring-punch up that custom bank in the scanner you have loaded with local frequencies!

Another place to us a air band scanner is at air shows.
If you want to listen to the military air demonstration teams a UHF AM capable radio is needed! And one that has independent selectable MODE I.E. AM FM nFM.
This really puts

you into the action!
Along with sunglasses, a folding chair and sun screen. Take along Walkman headphones and an extra set of batteries for the radio scanner and camera, one roll of film should do, for NASCAR or air shows.

If you have a camcorder patch the scanner into the audio input jack with a □Y□ splatter
so your able to listen with the head phones while recording the air show performance. If the Camcorder audio has s monitor jack then run the audio cable right into the camera while listening via the headphones on the monitor circuit
Here is a schedule for air shows
<http://www.aero-pix.com/schedule/sched2004dt.htm>

And frequencies<http://www.monitoringtimes.com/html/mtairshows.html>

Check out the individual air show's web site to see if they ban radio scanners and two-way radios!
If so, when you go to the show. keep the scanner in your vehicle, then leave about an hour before the demonstration. Drive out of the show area and listen to the air demonstration team off base! This will give you a head start on traffic, some folks do this at the stock car races also.
Have fun this summer and be safe!

Just keep in mind the capture range with most frequency counters is about five (5) feet for a VHF/UHF 5 watt handy talkie and twenty five (25) feet for a base station or 35 watt vehicle transceiver. With a beam antenna and amp it may be possible to get out five hundred (500) feet.

I use the Radio Shack counter when access to the transceiver is possible and the operating frequency band of the radios is not know, so a search with a scanner can find the frequency. So It do most of my frequency hunting with the SEARCH feature .What I would look for in a counter is the ability to detect and display squelch tone codes along with the unknown frequencies. Many scanners that do tone coded squelch will also search out the tones, But again you need to know what frequency band to set the scanner to, for a search.

With a frequency counter once the mike is keyed the frequency will be found but you have to be close to the transceiver.

That sounds low. I tested MFJ 886 and an Aceco FC2002 frequency counters using an ICOM IC-32AT dual band walkie-talkie on flat terrain -- line of sight conditions.
I published these results in Monitoring Times:

146 MHz:
MFJ886 - 261 ft.
FC2002 - 185 ft.

446 MHz:
MFJ886 - 145 ft.
FC2002 - 161 ft.

My electronic knowledge is probably less than yours, so not sure.
Hard to understand how it could work at all without it. I knew about resetting because I had same problem with mine.

If it works, I'd probably leave things alone.

I am sure he means in the city where there may or may not be interference from other sources, but 5 to about 25 feet is normal, like trying to get that new freq from your local police you must almost walk by the car when he keys the mic.

Or better yet,install a switch like I did.
You'll miss that beep at times,like when entering a bunch of freqs.
The beep is a confromation that the key was indeed pressed.

I have a Radio Shack Pro-2005 with the Optoelectronics OS-456 installed and the Optolinx interface.
All are 8 to 9 on a scale of 10. If you are not familiar, the OS-456 opens the 2005 to ALL frequencies between 25mHz to 1300 mHz.

The entire package is available for $250 plus shipping in CONUS.

I prefer PayPal but will accept U.S. Postal Money Order.

I've just been given a Bearcat 100 xlt handheld scanner. Heaven only knows how old it is - the manufacture date reads: ICHO. Anyway, is the darn thing even worth downloading a manual for? I know it "works" because I can pick up the weather service. The preprogrammed channels, however, don't work in my area. This was a friend's attempt to save me a few bucks. So, in the event that you folks don't think I should waste my time with this old thing, what make/model would you suggest for me? I just want to entertain myself with whatever I can listen to, especially at night when I can't sleep. I'm on disability and housebound, so money is an issue, but I'll pay a little extra if it's worth going up a step or two to have access to some "good stuff."
I read parts of the FAQ and have the impression that the recommendations might include Uniden BC 785 or Radio Shack Pro 95. I don't care if it's handheld or table model.
Thanks for all the help you can provide.

Go through this article;

<http://www.monitoringtimes.com/html/mtairshows.html>

It will give you much more than just frequencies, it will answer your questions!

NOT ONLY do you need the Aircraft bands VHF and UHF 220 MHz to 400 MHz coverage as the Monitoring Times article states YOU NEED SELECTABLE mode I.E. AM and FM.
Because the T Birds are on the 140 MHz military VHF Aircraft band, this gos above the civilian band from 138 MHZ to 144 MHz, in AM!
This is covered in depth in the article.

Connie - The first thing is to find out what sort of radio systems are in use by your local police, fire, and EMS agencies and what frequencies they use. You can probably find this information on the Web.

Your 100XLT is fine for monitoring conventional systems. To monitor trunked systems, you would need something like the BC785 or Pro 95 you mentioned.

Again, do a Web search to learn about trunked vs conventional systems.

Enjoy!

900 mhz. frequency relationships within the assigned frequency range are unique to the manufacturer of the equipment. There are no common "standard" frequencies. The analog signals typically are WBFM with very limited range.

CL2020 (are you sure that's not CR2020?) would indicate a cell 2.0 mm thick and 20mm diameter. And it would be a lithium one, and yes, 3V. I've no idea what the -1VC is, but it's not going to be the voltage.

Can you measure (physical size) the old battery or holder to confirm this size? It may help you source a replacement part with a totally different number, rather than looking for CR/CL2020. Just get the right physical size and the right voltage ...

What sleeve? If it's the kind I'm thinking of, it's a button cell style. They don't come with sleeves. If you mean some kind of metal clip that was round the old one, then you needed to keep that part -- it's the battery holder.
Don't try and solder the button cell to wires, that's not good for the battery.

>Problem #2 - How can I test the internal NiCd? I don't understand why it's

If it's been sitting discharged for a few years, it's probably died quietly.

The advice about using the scanner now and then to keep the battery charged wasn't entirely bull ...

The Uniden 796D software is a piece of crap and Uniden should be ashamed to include it. I wasted two weeks trying to get the crap to work.
It never did. The solution is www.butel.com. Buy the ARC250 software (approximately $50) and that will solve your bank information creation and file transfer problems. Attempting to manually program the 796D manually borders on insanity and takes forever.

Additionally, the 796D has a decoding problem with talkgroups 40,000 and higher. Uniden knows this and there is a software upgrade available on its website. I downloaded and installed it. It definitely was an improvement for 40,000 and higher talkgroups.

If you are not knowledgeable about trunking systems, the 796D can be very intimidating. It also is a rather poor performer for analog reception. The receiver sensitivity is not on par with an ICOM R7000, R7100 etc. I knew this before I bought my 796D. I bought it for digital trunking reception only.

The manual is not as bad as others I have experienced. However, there are some keyboard entries that are not documented in the manual.
The specific step instructions could be expanded and more specific. One command actually is reversed. I believe it is the Activity on/off.

Believe it or not, 100 talkgroup maximum is not enough for some metro type operations. In my area of central Virginia there is a regional 800 mhz. TRS including two counties and one city. It is extremely annoying monitoring one specific county and having other jurisdictions transmit on some of their TRS frequencies. Attempting to lockout the many unwanted talkgroups is not practical.

Even using a TRS receiver it is amazing how many conversations are missed because the receiver decodes only one talkgroup at a time.
This can be seen visually by using Trunktracker 3.8.3.

I have a 796D programing and helpful reception tips file included with my "W4UVV Virginia Frequency Directory-2004 Edition" CD ROM.

That is the big downside that is not promoted. I suspect the same type range max as the old 49/44 mhz. analog phones...not very far.

My battery says BP2500,600mAh 6.0v, in checking Radio Shack they have one that looks identical however it says 500mAh 6v, what is the difference and will it work in my Bearcat 2500xlt scanner?

simply that it will not power the device for as long.
i.e.
if the device uses 50mA of current an hour (50mAh)
then the original will run it for 12hrs the replacement for only 10hrs.

as a footnote: you might do better to shop around for a NiMH battery pack the type of batteries in the pack will have a significantly greater mAh rate than a standard NiCAD one and will probably not cost that much more.
the other benefit is that they do not suffer some of the re-charge life problems that NiCAD's have.

the down side is that ofcourse, to get more 'up' hours, you have to charge for more hours.

i have also known some 'built-in' charger circuits to complain or do not do a proper job.

but to all intents & purpose, NiMH are a direct replacement for NiCAD packs

hope this helps,

Yes ... although a quick check of a 20-mile radius search in the Cleveland area only shows licensee that would be using mid band for paging / signaling.

Concentrate your check in the ranges of 72.0 to 72.98 MHz and 75.0 to 75.98 MHz.

In the U.S., mid band has primarily been used by public safety (service code PW) for links between sites, such as between a dispatch center and remote transmitter and / or receivers.

Here in both N.C. and S.C., the mid band links are being phased out by wach state's highway patrol as microwave links replace them ... and replacement parts are hard to find.

It looks like the State of Ohio still has some mid band links in place, but I can't tell you if they are still active.

Because the 2500 and 3000 have a proprietary case, it may be cheaper to have a Batteries America (or similar store) rebuild your battery pack to your request ... discharge rate and type of batteries.

Battery-Tech ( www.ebatterytech.com ) is a vendor who appears at some hamfests, and used to list a 700 ma battery for the 2500 / 3000 at about $15. Phone is 800 = 442- 4275.

I am very happy with it. Even though I have purchased a 780, just so my failing memory doesn't have to constently remember the talk group codes. Its a solid performer. I have had the 895 for may be five years. I t is rock solid and though I don't do anything but listen to a predeterimined set of talk groups it is still performing like a champ. I think for about almost a year it has been on for almost 8 hours a day. Really solid radio.

I would keep the BC780's as they are far better radios than the BC796 which is less sensitive and has a slower computer interface. The BC780 is just a classic Uniden radio, best in its class when it was made. It makes a great MilAir radio and it is useful in scanning those LTR systems if you have any important ones in your area.

This ham has seven BC780s!
http://snipurl.com/6rp1

The BC796D may decode digital but it is bested by the PRO-96 digital scanner made by GRE which is easier to program and the PRO-96 sounds far better in digital mode. The PRO-96 has built in features like instant tone decode and the very important Sys ID scan to identify those trunking system control channels, a feature found only by running an external computer and a TRUNKER type program with a Uniden scanner. Add a PRO-96 which is destined to be a digital classic radio to your collection and keep at least one of your 780's and you have the best of both worlds, digital and analog.

You are confusing the 780 with the 785. The 780 is strictly analogue, the 785 has the option of installing a card for digital reception. The 796 can do both analogue and digital, no need for an optional card.

Hi
If all you intend to use it for mainly is the uhf band, then something like a Yaesu VR120 would be fine, there are loads of scanners that will do the job just as well, some even better, but the yaesu is not a bad price, in the region of £130-£150 for a new one.
Rog
PS, I have a source who can supply one for £110.00 brand new boxed with full 1 year warranty if interested.

Mine is a fine radio for Mil air frqs. Just as sensitive if not better than my BC780. I haven't really tried it much in the civilian aircraft band but don't doubt it's capability. What is a "good" price, in your mind?

P.S. Don't plan on doing any scanning with it as it is beastly s-l-o-w at about 2 ch/sec! (roughly) Stops for a few seconds or an instant. No other choices. And what's up with the USB/LSB on a VHF/UHF radio???
I assume you know it's capabilities?

I am looking for a Shinwa SR-001 Scanner.
Never had one - never used one - but I am interested in finding a small scanner that will receive 220 - 225 MHz in addition to the regular bands.

Good luck.
Why would you want an ancient radio like that ?

Since you're not an American, how would you know if there's a "police" state spreading across the country? There was nothing in that memo that the police in any country concerned about preventing terrorism wouldn't agree with...or those that aren't terrorists would object to.

BTW, what country are you from? I see you've spoofed the e-mail address for the Mossad. How many people has your country lost to terrorists? Let me guess, you're really from Canada.

When it happens to you and your country, then you'll have some room to talk. Until then, shut up.

Many of the newer wireless microphones operate in the 72-76 MHz band. Try scanning the region between 72 and 73 MHz for signals. The signals from the wireless mics are very low power, but with a good outdoor antenna and a preamp, the signals can be received at distances up to a half mile or so.

The inclusion of SSB makes it a fine HF receiver in addition to being able to monitor 2M and 70cM SSB/CW activity. I built a small up converter and plugged it into a spare socket internally. Yaesu already has a knock out for a 2nd SO-239 on the rear apron. Then it becomes a 0.5-900 MHz RX
